Imitate Me, Says England. His Horse, for Company. Surprise for Best Minds. Study of Stupidity.

—BY ARTHUR BRISBANE—

FRANCE AND England balanced their budgets, the British with $50,000,000 to spare.

And British authorities say that America should take Britain as an example to imitate.

It would be a pleasure to adopt the British suggestions, if we could adopt some other European methods.

If we could postpone paying what we owe, as France and Britain are postponing, or abandoning, payment of money borrowed in the United States, it might be easy for us to balance our budget.

If the ten billions that, like a pack of fools, we sent to Europe during the war hysteria could come back, there would be no trouble about our budget.

ENGLAND AND France give us a good imitation of the late lamented Abe Kabibble, who was invited to play poker in "a gentleman's game," no player compelled to show his hand.

To the question "Did you win?" he replied:

"How could I lose?"

A THOUSAND clergymen die, after lives of useful devotion and the world hears nothing of them. All the world will hear of the Rev. Dr. Uriah Myers, who died yesterday, aged 85.

That Dr. Myers spent his life working for others would not attract attention, but he owned a horse that lived to be 53 years old. Almost everybody was interested in that. And he believed that he would meet his old horse in heaven and that will interest everybody. He quoted the Bible in support of his belief.

THE RED Indians believed that they would have horses in heaven, and dogs, to hunt real bisons. Mohammed taught his followers that they would have a wonderful heaven, with young ladies, not their earthly wives, made of solid musk, they, the men, changed into angels, thirty feet tall.

Buddhists believe that, in place of an active heaven, they will attain Nirvana, and be free from struggle and striving forever.

And many in this depression would take kindly to that Nirvana idea.

HERE IS news to worry our power companies and public utilities generally, more than anything that could come out of Russia.

The New York East Methodist Episcopal conference, dropping into politics, demands "extensive state and federal public works to provide jobs" and, the part that will worry our best minds, these Methodist brethren demand public control of private industrial production, shorter hours and STATE OWNERSHIP OF PUBLIC UTILITIES.

The Methodist church has political influence, and if you doubt it try to get the average Congressman to admit that he is opposed to prohibition.

PERHAPS THE Methodists have heard that citizens of Jacksonville, Fla., which owns its own light and power plant, pay with one exception the lowest rates in America for light and power, and make a profit of one million, five hundred thousand dollars yearly to lower taxes.

The one exception is Seattle, Wash., which also owns its light and power plant.

How strange if the Methodists should run prohibition with the left hand, power, light and public utilities with the right hand.

PROF. WALTER B. PITKIN publishes "A Short Introduction to a History of Human Stupidity" in 500 pages.

You can't expect much of a race that is only twelve thousand years from the late stone age, Prof. Pitkin offers the fact that 84 out of every 100 persons are practically penniless when they reach the age of 65, as stupidity proof number one.

Stupidity, says the professor, is to "lack sensitiveness." Plato, Thomas Aquinas, Leonardo da Vinci and Goethe are far removed from stupidity, because of their great sensitiveness.

Prof. Pitkin does not say, but it is true, that stupidity promotes peace among human beings. If they were not so stupid they would not be so patient about a system that gives the great majority too little, and a few too much, in a land where there is enough for everybody.

RUSSIA DISCOVERS that paying everybody the same wages, on the theory that we all are brothers, except a few that run the country, does not work well.

Those more industrious and more intelligent will be paid three times as much as the others. Eventually there, as in America, some Russians will get a thousand times as much as other Russians, and that will be the beginning of real Russian prosperity.

BYERS DEATH BRINGS U.S. WARNING

Government Presses Quiz Into Radium 'Cures;' Walker Not Disturbed

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(AP.)—The death of Eben M. Byers was used today by Dr. Paul B. Dunbar, assistant chief of the food and drug administration, as a means of warning the public against indiscriminate taking of radium preparations without proper medical advice.

Byers, a wealthy Pittsburgh iron manufacturer, died in New York after taking a radioactive water over a period of two years.

Dr. Dunbar said:

"We were afraid something like this would happen. In 1928 we made a survey of the many radium products on the market and began issuing warnings to the public. Some of these made grossly exaggerated curative claims, and we proceeded against them.

DANGER CITED

"I feel that taking any preparation containing radium is a pretty dangerous thing and should not be done without competent medical advice."

Sale of "Radithor," a radium preparation taken by Byers, was left unhampered today by one government agency, while another began a general inquiry into sale of radium "cures."

Dr. Dunbar said the manufacturers of "Radithor"—the Bailey Radium Laboratories, Inc., of East Orange, N. J.—had not violated the food and drug laws in labeling their product. No false or fradu-

The President made his statement at a press conference as he paid tribute to the automobile industry by saying there was nothing that provided widespread employment more than automobile construction.

General Motors Auto, Household Exhibition Opens

Pittsburgh district shares 10 per cent of each $500 spent in the automobile industry was the message brought here today as the huge free exhibit of General Motors 1932 automobiles, household appliances and car accessories was prepared to open to the public in Motor Square Garden at 2:30 o'clock and continue through next week.

The opening was to be heralded by the explosion of 18 bombs in Schenley Oval.

The formal opening will be at 7:30 tonight, when W. P. Witherow, vice president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, will give a short address of welcome with messages from industrial leaders of the city. This program, with a special musical feature by Don Bestor and his orchestra, will be broadcast from radio station WWSW.

O'Brien Tried to Offer $20,000 in Vote Machine Deal, Verdict Declares

HARRISBURG, April 2.—(AP.)—A Dauphin County jury today decided George O'Brien, former appraiser of the Port of Philadelphia, tried to offer Richard J. Beamish, Secretary of the Commonwealth, a bribe of $20,000 to give a contract for Philadelphia's voting machines to the Shoup Voting Machine Company.

The jury's sealed verdict reached last night, was handed to Judge Frank B. Wickersham at the opening of court this morning. Court attaches said it was returned after deliberation of less than two hours.

Robert T. Fox, one of O'Brien's attorneys, announced that he will ask a new trial. He has four days in which to file his petition.

JAPAN RUSHES NEW TROOPS

TOKIO, April 2.—(AP.)—The Japanese government ordered a new military expedition of unannounced strength to proceed to Manchuria today to assist in putting down a rampant rebellion against the government of the new federated state under Henry Pu-Yi.

The new expedition was ordered to assist the present Japanese force, which consists of two army divisions, by crossing over the Tumen River from Korea. It was directed to begin operations at Chientao, near the Korean and Soviet Russian borders.

Fierce fighting was reported in that section today and the plight of the new government was said to be extremely grave.

TAX MEASURE SENT TO SENATE

Revision of $1,000,000,000 Revenue Bill Appears Certain in Upper Chamber

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The new $1,000,000,000 tax bill passed on to an uncertain fate in the Senate today while the House was confronted with a new struggle over the soldiers' bonus.

Fearful that cash payment of the $2,000,000,000 of adjusted service certificates may undo their victory for a tax bill that will balance the budget, House leaders prepared to resist the movement.

Senate leaders announced that they will back a tax bill that will end the Treasury deficit in 1933, but extensive revision was predicted for the measure that passed the House late yesterday by a vote of 327 to 64.

BONUS HEARINGS

Hearings on the bonus bills will be started on April 11 before the Ways and Means Committee with Acting Chairman Charles R. Crisp (Dem.), of Georgia, who led the tax fight, against cash payment.

The Senate Finance Committee, which will receive the House tax bill, is expected to begin hearings next week with the hope that tax legislation can be finally enacted by June 1.

Crisp, tired and worn by the long tax battle, was jubilant over the decision of the House to balance the budget. This, he said, means that the government's credit will be maintained and the dollar will retain its high place in the eyes of the world.

RAISES BILLION

The new tax bill, as passed by the House, is calculated to raise $1,032,000,000 by taxation; $200,000,000 is to be saved by slashing appropriations and $30,500,000 more added by miscellaneous postal rate boosts. This would balance the anticipated deficit in 1933 and leave a surplus of about $21,000,000.

As passed, the measure raises maximum income surtaxes to 40 per cent, estate taxes to 45 per cent, imposes a gift tax with a maximum of 33⅓ per cent, raises first class postage from two to three cents, imposes an excise tax on imported oil and coal, levies $75,000,000 on stock transfers and imposes many miscellaneous sales and "nuisance" taxes.

Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, has served notice that he will battle in the Senate for restoration of the manufacturers' excise tax.

Leaders of the automobile industry will fight in the Senate against heavy taxes laid on passenger cars, trucks and accessories.

SCOTLAND YARD IN LINDY HUNT

TRENTON, N. J., April 2.—(INS.)—Unusual significance today was attached to the secret mission which led Maj. Charles H. Schoefiel, second in command of the New Jersey State Police, to embark on a trip to England on a mysterious international angle in the hunt for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

The Major, now on the high seas, was due in London Monday and was reported to be hastening to Scotland Yard, Europe's most famous center of criminal investigation, for a conference.

The report was revived that attempts would be made to further examine the records of Betty Gow, Lindbergh nursemaid; Ollie Wheatley, butler, and his wife, housekeeper, all British subjects.

STILL CONFIDENT

NORFOLK, Va., April 2.—(AP.)—Three Norfolk men, who say they have never lost faith in their efforts, today continued to await further developments in negotiations for the recovery of the kidnaped baby of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Rear Admiral Guy G. Burrage, retired, spokesman for the intermediaries, stated that there had been a new development since Thursday morning, but there was no other intimation of what progress was being made. Admiral Burrage said that disclosure of the new development would be harmful and declined to comment further.

Stimson plans to remain in Geneva only a few days. After a brief survey of conditions he will return to this country, with Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, reassuming the active chairmanship of the American delegation.

Secretary Stimson's visit abroad, it was said authoritatively, has "no other purpose than the work of the conference."

He recently has been confined to his home by illness. Although attending cabinet meetings, he has conducted State Department affairs principally from his home, Woodley.

Parley on Carmen's Wages to Continue

Two conferences were held yesterday by representatives of the Street Railway Employes Union and the Pittsburgh Railways Company, regarding framing of a new wage agreement to take the place of the two-year contract which expires May 1.

Neither side would discuss reports that the company has requested the platform men to accept a voluntary reduction of 10 per cent or a company cut of about 15 per cent. It is said the conference would be continued Monday.

Rivers Again Fall, Flood Stage Missed

After reaching 23.8 feet, more than a foot below the flood stage, the rivers were falling early today, and the stage at 8 o'clock was reported at 22.7 feet. Heavy rains and snow at the upper branches of the rivers caused the near flood stage. The only downtown place affected by the high waters were the Baltimore and Ohio tracks and warehouse on the Allegheny River at the Seventh Street Bridge.

Daughter, Husband Give Father Blood

A blood transfusion in which his daughter and son-in-law were donors improved the condition of Edward Cook, 63, of 1850 Morningside avenue, a pensioned policeman, in St. Francis Hospital today.

The daughter, Mrs. Marie McKee, and her husband, James McKee, of 1730 Jancey street, each gave a pint of blood last night. The police radio broadcast an appeal for donors and several patrolmen went to the hospital, but the blood of the couple was found most suitable.

He summoned police, who took the child to the hospital.

Firemen carried the two sick adults over the roof of an adjoining house to safety. Donora firemen built a dam in a creek nearby to provide a water supply. The Crompton home was virtually destroyed with a loss of $7,000 while a dwelling adjoining occupied by Hugh Richenson was damaged $1,500.

Bandits Posing as Officers Massacre 7 in Family

EL PASO, Tex., April 2.—(INS.)—Possibility that military force, which thus far has been denied, would again be sought in an effort to put down bandit raids along the border of New Mexico loomed today as seven persons lay dead as the result of the latest raid.

Although officers voiced the opinion that bandits staging the latest raid at Chamberino, N. M., 28 miles northwest of here, were not from Mexico, citizens who have been the victims of numerous pillagings during the past few weeks again raised a cry for help.

Victims of the latest raid are all members of the same family. The dead were Mrs. Felomena Espinosa, 48, and her children: Luis, 32; Hipolito, 26; Andres, 23; Visenti, 18; Juanita, 12, and Selita, 9.

The victims were all shot down as they stood huddled in the small kitchen of their home by three bandits who posed as New Mexico officers under the pretext of examining cattle in order to gain entrance. They demanded $5,000 which they claimed was hidden in the house.

Three of the family who escaped death owe their lives to the fact the bandits did not examine them to determine whether they were dead.

Ex-Kaiser Rejects Move To Regain German Throne

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, April 2.—A recent attempt to restore the Hohenzollern dynasty to power in Germany was prevented by no less a personage than the exiled former Kaiser Wilhelm II himself, it was revealed to International News Service today by an unimpeachable authority.

Influential Monarchists and Nationalists, seeing futility in the uniting of the Hugenberg and Duesterberg forces behind Adolf Hitler as the Nationalist candidate for the presidency, advanced the candidacy of the former Crown Prince.

Hitler agreed in writing to withdraw from the presidential race in favor of the Crown Prince, while President Paul von Hindenburg, who now will be re-elected, was reported to have expressed his sentiments by saying, "as a former field-marshal under the Kaiser I would not and could not oppose the Hohenzollern family."

This would have left the field clear for a Hohenzollern regime except for Socialists and Communists, whose vote would have been comparatively nil. Victory appeared certain for the Crown Prince, who reticently accepted, but on condition of his father's approval.

The Kaiser wired his reply at 6 p. m. Thursday, just six hours before the deadline for filing the presidential nomination petitions. Dated Doorn Castle, Doorn, Holland, it read:

"An innate regard for my people and my country prevents my consent at this time."

The crown prince immediately withdrew.

COUZENS LEADS FIGHT ON RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE BOARD

RAILROAD LOAN AGAIN SCORED IN SENATE

Administration to Oppose Bill Giving I. C. C. Control Of Carrier Borrowings

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A real battle over the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's policies loomed today as the Senate divided on the Couzens bill, giving the Interstate Commerce Commission exclusive authority over railroad loans.

The bill would strip the corporation of its power to make railroad loans, turn its $400,000,000 railroad fund over to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and limit the purposes of such loans. The Commission could lend federal funds to the railroads only to pay maturities and interest on bonds, debentures or notes.

LOAN PROTESTED

The controversy developed from a $12,800,000 loan by the Corporation to the Missouri Pacific Railroad, of which $5,850,000 was set aside to repay a loan to J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and other Wall street financiers. A number of Senators incensed by this use of government funds at first planned to force repeal of the loans only to learn later—and to their surprise—that it was fully authorized by the reconstruction act.

Couzens then sponsored his measure to take this power from the corporation. It drew some support from Republicans and Democrats, but there was a strong likelihood administration forces would oppose it. Senator McNary (Rep.), of Oregon, said:

"There is a matter of divided authority between the corporation and commission now. I rather believe the Couzens bill is a good measure, since it would put all the authority under one head."

WATSON CAUTIOUS

Senator Watson (Rep.), of Indiana, Republican floor leader, was not so optimistic about the bill. He declared:

"I don't believe it's a good thing. I have great confidence in the economic wisdom and administrative ability of Gen. Dawes, who heads the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. We gave him ample authority to carry out our purpose of stabilizing the credit structure of industry and business. I would hesitate to interfere with his plans. I want to think it over before I can indorse any bill taking power away from the corporation."

Couzens justified the bill by declaring it would keep the government out of the railroad business. In protesting against the loan to the Missouri Pacific road, Couzens predicted the government would become the owner of the road if it defaulted in repayment of the loan. He said it was only natural that the government loans would be defaulted by the weaker roads and that this would end in the government being projected into the railroad business.

Los Angeles Recall Election Ban Denied

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—(AP.)—Superior Judge Douglas Edmonds has sustained a demurrer against an injunction suit seeking to halt the recall election against Mayor John C. Porter on May 3.

Mayor Porter had not figured in the suit, having announced at the time the petitions were filed that he wished "to fight this thing out at the polls." He is charged with incompetency.

Runs for Legislature As Dry Law Enemy

Herbert S. Schaeffer, of 1235 West North avenue, has announced the platform on which he is running for the General Assembly in the Tenth Legislative District. He said he favored repeal of the state prohibition enforcement act, repeal of the blue laws, legislation to curb public utilities, a state bonus for soldiers and bills to aid the unemployed.

Chief Flocker Again Heads Police Lodge

Police Chief John Flocker, of Ambridge, was re-elected president of Beaver Valley Lodge No. 4 Fraternal Order of Police at the annual election held last night. Other officers named include Chief P. Conover Ousted, McGovern Kin Gets Medical Post

Allegheny County is without a county medical director today because of an order discharging Dr. John R. Conover, who was notified of his dismissal in a letter from Dr. Theodore B. Appel, State Secretary of Health.

His place will be given to a relative of County Commissioner C. C. McGovern.

Conover's successor, Dr. Eugene Conti, 8 Ellsworth terrace, will not take office until April 8. Dr. Conti was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh in 1923, and was registered as a physician in 1928. He is a nephew of Commissioner McGovern, who sponsored him for the position.

No reason for dismissal was given in the letter which Dr. Conover received Thursday. He was ordered to vacate the office not later than yesterday. Commenting on his dismissal, Dr. Conover said:

"I have been the county medical director for nine years and at no time was there cause for complaint about my work. Before that I was assistant director in the state laboratory. I have never been interested in politics, because I was too occupied with my work."

Dr. Conover was brought from France in July 1919, to the State Department of Health by Dr. Edward Martin, who then was secretary. Before his appointment he had served overseas in the Army Medical Corps for 27 months. Dr. Conover was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, class of 1914.

DE VALERA DEFI GETS SETBACK

DUBLIN, April 2.—(INS.)—Still another draft of the Irish Free State reply to Great Britain's note on the oath question was being worked upon today, this latest delay being the result of a heated five-hour cabinet session in which the more moderate elements gained a signal victory over President Eamonn De Valera.

Although all members of the cabinet, or executive council, refused comment, International News Service learned that the moderate group, led by Sean Lemass, minister of industry and commerce, had forced De Valera to accede to demands to leave the way open for negotiations between the Free State and England over the oath and annuities questions.

Meanwhile certain factions of the government watched with apprehension development of the Republican Green Shirt movement. The drive, organized by extremist Republicans seeking immediate and complete independence of an unpartitioned Ireland, was known to be gaining headway rapidly. Secret meetings are being held in various places outside Dublin.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., April 2.—(INS.)—Military ceremonies were planned today for the funeral of Brig. Gen. Edward Settle Godfrey, U. S. A., retired, hero of the Indian Wars, who died at the age of 88.

The veteran of many battles prevented a terrific disaster when he saved part of Maj. Marcus A. Reno's command from being wiped out by the Sioux, June 26, 1876, the day after the command of Gen. George A. Custer was massacred in Little Big Horn Valley in Montana.

He told hospital authorities they said that he had been struck by a truck, but they reported that there were no marks on his body.

WARNING GIVEN ON RADIUM

lent claims were made, Dr. Dunbar said.

CLAIM STANDS UP

The only claim presented on the label was that the medicine was radioactive and this has been found by the administration to be true.

"Radithor" has been studied several times and found to comply with the food and drug law in every respect. The investigation, inspired by Byers' death, was made to determine if there were some new feature or angle in the case.

The trade commission, however, instructed its New York office to put all other work aside and expedite investigations of complaints against certain radium preparations.

Inquiries have been made secretly for several months into the advertisement, manufacture and sale of products which complaints have charged are dangerous to health.

Mayor Walker Taking Radium Treatments

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—The machinery of the Federal Trade Commission was turned to an investigation of "Radium Cures" as a finding of "accidental death" with the added notation that he "drank radium water for the past two years" was made in the case of Eben M. Byers.

Meanwhile, Mayor Walker disclosed that for six months he had been using a radium energy apparatus designed to infuse water with radium energy. The apparatus was recommended to him, the Mayor said, by friends who said it gave relief for neuritis and rheumatism. He said he did not know if it had benefitted him, adding that the water produced by his machine was "entirely different" from that which is blamed for Byers' death.

FUNERAL HERE TODAY

Funeral services for Eben M. Byers, were to be held this afternoon from the home of her brother, J. F. Byers, in Sewickley. The body was returned to Sewickley today by Byers' brother-in-law, J. Denison Lyon. Interment following the services in the home was to be private.

Dr. C. C. Moyar, Pittsburgh physician, who had treated Byers until a year ago and who yesterday denied Byers died of radium poisoning, today said he would have no further comment to make unless summoned in some formal procedure.

2 Held for Court In Bridgeville Row

Pete Cherry, 24, of 433 Railroad street, and Narini Dalsuffo, 25, of 621 Baldwin street, both of Bridgeville, whose arrest by Mt. Lebanon officers in the face of a Bridgeville crowd precipitated a police rift between Mt. Lebanon and Bridgeville, were held for court when they waived hearing before Justice of the Peace Eugene B. Bishop, of Mt. Lebanon, last night.

Warrants, sworn by the pair against Lieut. Ted Carrington and Motorcycle Officer Robert Hasley, of Mt. Lebanon, charging assault and battery in connection with their arrest, had not been served.

FUGASSI NEXT TO TESTIFY IN TRUCK AUDIT

Center of Barr, Mansfield Job Dispute Expected to Be Important Witness

John A. Fugassi, superintendent of maintenance of the county, who was not fired but "relieved of his duties" by Commissioner C. M. Barr, will be the first witness on the stand when the Commissioners' audit being conducted before Controller Robert G. Woodside, resumes Monday morning.

That Fugassi's testimony may bring out important features was indicated yesterday by Barr and Director of Highways F. J. Chester in the conflicting statements they made concerning Fugassi's relief from duty, but continuance on the payroll.

HASTY DISMISSAL

Barr, in a hurried meeting with Commissioner W. D. Mansfield after he had said that he knew nothing of Fugassi's removal but if Chester had done it he would back him to the limit, said:

"It was to protect the county's records that this action was taken. It was an emergency. I want to do things right and protect the interests of the taxpayers. If hasty action is necessary I will take it."

He did not elaborate on his inference that Fugassi might be responsible for any records needed in the truck hire audit other than to say that Edward F. Moriarity, division superintendent of the Department of Public Works, fired at the Commissioners' meeting held Thursday at Commissioner C. C. McGovern's hospital bedside, had been heard to remark, according to Barr:

"It's a pity they didn't burn every d—n record in the department."

CONFUSION OVER ACTION

Both Mansfield and McGovern yesterday denied any knowledge of Fugassi's removal as superintendent of maintenance, as did Barr when first asked about it.

Mansfield, in discussing the matter with Barr, said:

"No one Commissioner nor any department head has the legal right to dismiss anybody. This is a matter for the Board of Commissioners. In relieving any department head of duties the entire board should act.

"I cannot understand why this was done and not brought up at the meeting yesterday; you knew about it Tuesday."

Barr said it was an oversight, and that he understood that the agreement of the three Commissioners was that the county work had been divided and that he was a committee of one to handle the Department of Highways.

Mansfield then said:

"That's the first I ever heard of dividing up the county work and I am pretty good at remembering what happens at meetings. If the work has been divided up what part of it is my share?"

WANTS TEAM WORK

Barr was unable to answer, but said that more "team work" is necessary on the part of the Commissioners.

McGovern, at the Valley Hospital, Sewickley, last night said:

"The plans for the reorganization of the road department did not include dismissals at this time, except for cause, of any department heads. The matter of relieving Fugassi of his duties did not come up at our meeting."

FUGASSI MYSTIFIED

Fugassi yesterday said:

"I don't know what this is all about. If they want to fire me why didn't they do it. I don't know what records anybody is thinking about destroying. There are complete, accurate records of the truck hire in the department. The auditors have seen them and they show everything."

During his performance he snaps his fingers in accompaniment with such force that it rings throughout the auditorium.

3 MEN GUILTY IN KIDNAPING

DENVER, April 2.—(AP.)—Sentences of from one to seven years in prison faced three men today for the kidnaping of Benjamin P. Bower, who was held five days last January before his release without payment of $50,000 ransom.

The defendants, George W. Reed, a barber, Arthur M. Taylor, a truck driver, and Joe Pannell, an ex-pugilist, were convicted late yesterday by a jury which recommended leniency.

Charles R. Froman, defense attorney, said he considered the verdict was based "not on the evidence, but on the nation-wide clamor against kidnaping." He seeks a new trial.

MOTORS SHOW OPENS HERE

gram at 8 o'clock in the William Penn Hotel. A jubilee atmosphere permeated the scene as the General Motors Corporation cheerleader, William Powers, of Detroit, led the forces through songs, cheers and friendly rivalry.

That the steel and glass industry of the district share the 10 per cent of each $500 spent by the industry was stressed by W. R. Huber, of Detroit, in emphasizing not alone the important business revival possible for local dealers from the exhibit, but how allied industries will share in the success.

The General Motors divisions provide income for 6,000,000 people, and every transaction of the corporation is reflected throughout the country, Charles Allen, Frigidair Corporation executive, of Dayton, explained. Charles Milliken, of Pittsburgh, presided.

The remainder of the morning was devoted to a pre-showing of the exhibits for dealers, salesmen and office staffs.

Pittsburgh's show is part of a national program. Displays are being staged simultaneously in 55 cities. "Work for Many Hands" is the theme behind the exhibits as General Motors strives to increase sales in the automobile industry and restore permanent employment, not only to its own workers but to the many industries connected with the manufacture of automobiles, electric refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, electric fans and generators and car accessories.

The exhibit will be open daily next week from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m., with musical programs afternoon and night. No admission will be charged and a car, refrigerator and other gifts will be presented as the exhibit nears its close.

A special feature of the exhibit has been arranged for boys. A demonstration will be staged in Napoleonic Coach-building as sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph and Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild. Local members of the guild will work on models and offer other members and interested boys the opportunity to overcome difficult problems in the construction work.

TRANSIT GROUP TO CONFER ON SUBWAY

Commission to Take Up Grant Street Loop Cost With Brown, Snodgrass

The City Transit Commission was to meet today with Norman F. Brown and Edward Snodgrass, Jr., to discuss costs of the proposed Grant street subway loop, which Brown estimates can be built for $5,500,000.

The latest proposal of the Transit Commission is a smaller loop under Smithfield street, Seventh avenue, Liberty avenue, Ferry and Water streets. The cost estimated for the Smithfield street loop is $5,000,000, and includes about one-half as much subway as the Grant street loop.

WIDE DIFFERENCE

The wide difference in estimated costs was to be considered at the conference. Brown's estimate was made on the basis of the public utility corporations being responsible for moving their lines from the path of the subway, he declared. The cost of moving water lines and sewers was included, he said.

Winters Haydock, engineer for the Transit Commission, said last night the commission will give the new plan careful attention and report its recommendations as soon as possible. A public hearing on the subway has been scheduled before City Council Wednesday.

TRANSIT MEMBERS

The Transit Commission includes George S. Davison, chairman; L. W. Monteverde, W. M. Jacoby, Henry Tranter and E. A. Young.

E. K. Morse and George M. Lehman, engineers on the Flood Commission, are to confer with Charles M. Reppert, chief city engineer, on plans for the improvement of the wharves. The Flood Commission turned over the results of its investigation to city authorities in 1926, with the request that the department of public works devise a plan for water front improvements.

BLAST AND FLAMES IMPERIL SIX EAST BOROUGHS FAMILIES

3 CHILDREN RESCUED BY MOTHER

Gas Explosion Damages East Pittsburgh Buildings; 4 Flee Wilkinsburg Blaze

Six families were forced to flee, an aged woman was carried to safety, and a mother carried out her three children in two East Borough fires, one of which followed a gas explosion, early today.

Mrs. E. G. Kilchstein, 60, of 333 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, an invalid, was carried by firemen to safety when the gas explosion damaged a double three-story building at 329-31 Electric avenue early today.

The woman, after she was carried from the dwelling, attempted to return for her purse, containing $50, but was prevented by firemen, who recovered the money later.

$20,000 DAMAGE

Fire companies from East Pittsburgh, North Braddock, Turtle Creek and Forest Hills fought the fire that followed the explosion. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

The explosion occurred in a shoe repair shop at 331 Electric avenue, according to firemen. Martin Schwartz, his wife and four children, who occupied the second floor, were visiting in Cleveland.

Mrs. Martha Weschler, 32, carried her three children, Anthony, 9, Clara, 7, and Christine, 5, to safety when the blaze threatened her adjoining dwelling at 327 Electric avenue. The mother suffered a sprained ankle when she tripped over a fire hose.

Mrs. Ethel Stern, who occupies the first and second floors of 333 Electric avenue, fled to safety.

FLEE IN NIGHTCLOTHES

George Cummings and his wife, Margaret, and her brother, George Holter, who occupied the second floor of 335 Electric avenue, fled from their apartment in night attire.

Mrs. Ellen Brotsman and her daughter, Ellen, also fled from their apartment on the second floor of 327 Electric avenue.

The blast, which firemen described as a gas explosion, blew the front out of the building at 329-31 Electric avenue, and damaged the adjoining dwellings.

S. J. Wood and his wife, and two nurses were forced to flee when fire damaged a three-story apartment building at 1121 Ross avenue, Wilkinsburg, early today.

The Misses Edna and Pauline Johns, the nurses, were forced out of their third floor apartment when the fire that started in the basement worked into their quarters.

The second floor was unoccupied.

Fire Chief William Thompson, who said he could not determine the source of the fire, estimated the damage at $7,000.

A disturbance is centered over Iowa, lowest barometer reported, 29.56 inches, at Des Moines, and covers the central and northern plain states, the Upper Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley and the lake region. It is causing cloudy weather over most of the northern states, but precipitation is very light. Light snow or rain is in progress this morning over the lake region. There was a marked rise in temperature east of the Rocky Mountains, while in the Northwest the temperature changes was towards colder.

River Conditions.

The Upper Allegheny River is about stationary and the Ohio from Dam No. 9 to below Wheeling is still rising slowly. The crest of the rise at Pittsburgh was 22.8 feet from 4 to 5 p. m. yesterday. SAFE CRACKED

SAFE 'CRACKED,' $1,000 TAKEN

The second safe blowing job, presumably by professional cracksmen, in a week was reported today by the I. W. Scott Company, seed dealers, 500 Liberty avenue. A new type safe was "cracked" last night and between $800 and $1,000 taken, police were informed. The robbers left change, checks and money orders scattered on the floor, taking only bills.

The Bartley Hardware Company, Penn and Frankstown avenues, was robbed of several hundred dollars in a safe blowing early this week.

Irish Air Included In Church Hymnal

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 2.—(AP.)—Five hundred hymns, 150 of them new, were approved by the content committee of the Presbyterian Church of the United States at the end of a five day conference yesterday.

With only few exceptions, four verses will be the limit of the hymns. Many, including "Onward Christian Soldiers," have been cut to three, in keeping, Chairman Hugh T. Kerr, of Pittsburgh, said, with the modern trend for shorter services. An Irish air was included, for the first time.

MELLON SAILS FOR ENGLAND

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—Andrew W. Mellon, new United States Ambassador to Great Britain, sailed yesterday on the Majestic for London, convinced he will enjoy the experience that awaits him. Standing at the door of his luxurious suite, bidding goodbye to friends, he said:

"I have spent a great deal of time in England and of course I will like it there."

The former Secretary of the Treasury, who celebrated his 77th birthday last week, was asked a long list of questions about taxations, reparations, balancing of the federal budget and national politics, but as he waved them aside with his hand he said:

"Any statement I might make at this time might be just a lot of platitudes and why talk platitudes? Maybe later—"

2 Held, Seek Third In Holdup Attempt

Two young men were being held in Center Avenue Police Station and police were searching for another today in connection with the alleged attempted holdup of the store of A. Kirschbauf, at Center avenue and Fullerton street. Police said the two young men, Melvin Sennett, 24, of 402 Atwood street, and Mike Johnansky, 23, of 16 Mackey street, were arrested in a hired car, after a police radio car had chased them from the place of the attempted stickup. Police said customers had identified the boys as having been near the store at the time. A revolver was found in their car when halted by police, they reported.

10,000 ABANDON SINKING TOWN IN ITALY

Buildings Vanish Into Old Roman Caves; Residents Pack Goods, Escape Safely

NAPLES, April 2.—(AP.)—Inhabitants of Villa Santa Stefano, midway between Naples and Rome, yesterday saw their town disappearing into the ancient Roman caves over which it is built, and fled for safety.

Ten thousand persons abandoned the place as buildings slowly slid from view into a pit that opened along the entire length of Via Leonina, a street that extends the width of the city. It was feared the entire town would disappear.

The cave-in was thought to have been caused by river water seeping through the ground under the town, which broke down the roof supports of the caves.

BUILDINGS VANISH

As the town, an agricultural community in the Province of Frosinone, began to sink into the caves 10 buildings disappeared, and many others gave signs of caving. The remainder of the town slid toward the center of the pit formed along Via Leonina.

Immediately the wholesale exodus began. So slow was the movement of the earth that all the inhabitants had time to escape without casualties, streaming in all directions.

They piled as much of their possessions as they could gather on their backs or in donkey carts and hastened to a safe distance. Some pitched camp while others pressed on to neighborhood towns, villages and farm houses.

ALL ORDERED OUT

As night fell most of the people were out and the few who remained were ordered by the authorities to leave immediately.

Premier Mussolini, on learning in Rome of the cave-in and consequent flight of the people, ordered surrounding towns to accommodate the refugees.

The city's sinking continued slowly into the night, affecting principally the central part of town, where many buildings were settling.

WIFE ON STRIKE, TEACHER HOLDS

His wife engaged in a "deliberate domestic strike" for more than five years, Strawder A. Ringer, former South Hills High School instructor, charged in his bill of particulars in his divorce suit against Frances E. Ringer, of 33 Pasadena street, in Common Pleas Court.

Ringer said his wife announced to him May 11, 1926:

"It is none of your business what I do, you can do as you please. I am going my way and you can go yours; you are guilty or you would not have been transferred from the South Hills High School; why should I care for you?"

Recently, by reason of the statute of limitations, Ringer's action for damages for alleged slander against the principal of the South Hills High School failed. The alleged slander included an insinuation that Ringer had as an "affinity" one of his girl pupils.

Historical Society Forms in Franklin

FRANKLIN, Pa., April 2.—Given impetus by the celebration of the Washington bi-centennial and the fact that George Washington spent some time here on his trip to and from Fort Leboeuf, the Franklin Historical Society has been organized.

SLEUTHS STILL SEE 'LEAK' AT BRIDGE

30,000 Battling Mystery 'Par' in Culbertson's Olympic; 4 Hold Secret.

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—While detectives snooped around corners to try to spot those with advance knowledge of the 16 "secret" hands, some 30,000 contract bridge players pitted their wits last night against an entirely new antagonist—Old Man Par.

It was the first "world bridge Olympic" conceived and staged by Ely Culbertson, the expert whose adeptness with the pasteboards is exceeded only by his flair for the spectacular.

30,000 PLAYERS

Robert Murray, secretary of the Culbertsonian National Bridge League, placed the number of players at "between 30,000 and 33,000"—and possibly more. They are scattered, said Mr. Murray, in all parts of the civilized world that contain a table and four chairs.

Statistically speaking, 35 countries are embroiled. There is a game in Calcutta, another in Bombay, another in Cairo. The dignified officers of the Army War College play in Washington while their cousins of the Navy shuffle up in far-off Samoa.

There were 60 tables for charity in Sewickley, Pa., and the largest game of all was in Los Angeles with 200 tables at the Ambassador Hotel.

HANDS 'SUBTLE'

Culbertson said the 16 hands are so "beautifully subtle" that the average expert might study them for a week without knowing the "par" of their play, which, until 6 p. m. today will be locked in the secretive brains of the tournament committee, Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson, Theodore A. Lightner and Baron Waldemar von Zedtwitz.

In other words, if players bid grand slams last night, and made them, it didn't count, maybe, unless the committee has decided in advance that a grand slam ought to have been bid. There'll be no shooting at the moon in this Olympic.

Society Here Enters 'Olympic' for Charity

Fifty tables of Sewickley and Pittsburgh social registerites played at the Edgeworth Club last night, with Sewickley Valley unemployed as the beneficiaries, in the first world bridge Olympic, conducted by Ely Culbertson from New York.

Mr. Culbertson and his assistants will check the playing of the 16 hands, and tonight announce the winners.

Mrs. Nelson Van Kleeck was in charge of the Sewickley Valley tournament, assisted by Mrs. Richmond P. Ball, Miss Dorothy Liggett, Miss Eleanor Gilchrist and Emily Stuart.

Small dinner parties galore at the clubhouse preceded the entertaining. Hostesses included Mrs. Van Kleeck, Mrs. J. W. Austin, Jr., Mrs. Eugene H. Heald, Mrs. Robert H. McCague, Mrs. Ball, Mrs. Stafford K. Colby, Mrs. James W. Cree, Mrs. F. W. Newbit and Mrs. John Joy Edson, Jr.

Columbia Expels Critic of Football

NEW YORK, April 1.—(AP.)—Reed Harris, editor of the Columbia Spectater and a harsh critic of intercollegiate football, was expelled from Columbia University today by Dean Herbert E. Hawkes, acting with the approval of President Nicholas Murray Butler.

Dean Hawkes said Harris' expulsion was "due to the discourteay, innuendoes and misrepresentations" which had appeared in the college newspaper. Harris called football a "racket" last fall and asserted college players at Columbia and elsewhere were in reality "semi-professionals."

12, SAVES PLAYMATE, 8

ROBERT REUTZEL, 12 — RONALD SOLOMON, 8

Warming playmates at the Solomon home, 1522 Dormont avenue, Dormont, talking about their near-tragedy: Ronald fell into Dormont's municipal swimming pool, Robert, 1540 Alabama avenue, jumped in and saved him. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

DROWNING BOY SAVED BY PAL

Thanks to his 12-year-old playmate, Donald Solomon, 8, 1522 Dormont avenue, is alive today.

Rescued from drowning by Robert Reutzel, 12, 1540 Alabama avenue, Dormont, he was suffering no ill effects from his plunge into the Dormont pool.

The two boys were jumping on logs floating in the pool late yesterday. Ronald, missing his step, fell into the icy water at the deep end. Unable to swim, he started to sink, screaming for help. His friend, a good swimmer, plunged in and carried him to the edge of the pool where they were assisted out by a passer-by.

Woman Wins Order To Free Husband

Milton Pittler was ordered released from County Jail if $5,000 bail is posted and a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by his wife, Ida Pittler, was continued to April 12 by Judge George V. Moore in Common Pleas Court.

The petition of Mrs. Pittler alleged he was committed to jail March 26 by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones on a charge of robbery but that his release on bail was interfered with by a detainer from Detroit charging him with grand larceny there in 1929.

Artists Offer Work For Food, Clothing

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—The Society of Independent Artists opened its annual exhibition in Grand Central Palace last night, with members willing to barter their works for what you have.

Many have expressed readiness to exchange their paintings for dental work, clothing, rent, food or anything that is offered them.

WAR VET KILLER DIES IN CHAIR

TRENTON, N. J., April 2.—(INS.)—William Moore Fraser, confessed slayer of Mrs. Phoebe Lillian Stader, died last night in the electric chair despite desperate last minute efforts on the part of war comrades to save him.

Members of the Fourth Division, with which Fraser served during the war, attempted to persuade Gov. A. Harry Moore to commute his sentence to life imprisonment but the Governor followed the lead of the court of pardons which refused to reconsider the sentence of death passed upon Fraser nearly a year ago.

Fraser, confident to the last that his appeal for executive clemency would be allowed, walked unhurriedly into the white-washed death chamber in the New Jersey prison. He remained a passive spectator while Robert Elliott, state executioner adjusted the straps. Five minutes later he was pronounced dead.

CHURCHES JOIN APPEALS FOR RELIEF DRIVE

Jews Add Power to Family-Help-Family Plan; Radio And Pulpit Pleas Arranged

Jewish congregations in Allegheny County will participate with churches of other denominations in announcing the plan of Senator Frank J. Harris for family-help-family relief. Several rabbis met with Senator Harris yesterday and agreed to deliver sermons on the necessity for and aims of the drive.

Among Jewish leaders who were named on a committee to further the campaign through the aid of their congregations were Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson, Rabbi Benjamin Lichter, Rabbi Wolf Leiter, Rabbi Egon Pesson and Rabbi Benedict B. Glazer. This action followed the formation of a committee by Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of the Pittsburgh Catholic Diocese, to work in the Catholic parishes.

RADIO CAMPAIGN

A program of radio broadcasts, to continue 10 days and include daily broadcasts on every local station, will get under way tomorrow. Two stations will have prominent speakers outline the campaign, while on the other three stations there will be dramatizations.

RELIEF BURDEN GROWS

The demand for direct relief from the six city stations exceeded the estimate of relief workers yesterday. Thursday's expenditures amounted to $11,287 for 2,466 individual orders. Groceries, coal and clothing was distributed. Although the county direct relief began late Thursday, 245 orders were filled that day and expenditures amounted to $1,317.34.

The food and clothing which is being provided for needy children by the Pittsburgh public schools will be continued through a gift of $50,000 from the H. C. Frick Educational Commission. The schools have been providing relief since the fall term and at present are providing food to nearly 15,000 children. During the week of March 11, milk was provided for 9,144 children by the school board and private contributions provided milk for 1,929.

During the week of March 11, the total cash outlay reported by the various schools was $1,003.95.

$50,000 FOR CHILDREN

The contribution of the commission will make possible the continuance of relief during the summer months. The resolution calling for the contribution follows:

"That the Henry C. Frick Educational Commission appropriate from its income not to exceed $25,000 for each of the months of July and August, 1932, to be used through the Board of Public Education for food for undernourished children, whose health and school efficiency would be jeopardized without this food."

There was a slight increase noted in the number of applicants received at the headquarters of the Thrift Garden Committee of the Allegheny County Emergency Association, 516 Grant street, yesterday. Residents from all parts of the county are applying for garden plots, on which they hope to raise crops this summer. The ground will be plowed free, seeds will be furnished, and the garden plots will be given police protection.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Society Happenings

Hot Springs, Va., has always been a mecca for society folks, and at this time of the year in particular, when spring brings out the wanderlust in the most staid person.

The Pittsburgh colony at the Homestead boasts a number of new arrivals. The George H. Clapps, of Sewickley, have as their guests at the resort, their daughter, Mrs. William Welch Collin, Jr., with her daughter Katherine. During the Easter holidays they were joined by another daughter, Mrs. William W. Galbraith and Mr. Galbraith.

The Howard S. Evanses have recently become members of the colony, with their daughters, Evelyn and Laura. And the J. E. McKelvys are there for a brief sojourn. The Paul C. Downings, of Madison, N. J., who are at the Homestead, have a Pittsburgh guest, popular Virginia Drake, daughter of the J. Frank Drakes, of Pembroke place.

PRINCESS LINE IS FAVORED AS THE IDEAL SILHOUETTE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 2.—Designers constantly reiterate that they do not dictate the mode, but exist merely to interpret the wishes of their clients. And this seems to be so, when one remarks how the princess line with but slight variations continues to be with us season after season. Women have found in the "real silhouette," one that shows off the slim form that so very often has achieved only after various efforts. And naturally a fussy silhouette would shock it. The Directoire line has been subtly blended this season with the general princess silhouette, the high waistline and moulded effect marking many of the newer models. The hipline as well as the bosom is invariably very much in style often the skirt shows a marvel flare. This composite silhouette seems to please most women, since it is to be found in so many collections. The majority of frocks eschew all forms of fussiness and even when tiered or flounced skirts are used, the clinging tendency is obvious.

* * *

TYPICAL OF THE collection shown by Lucile Paray is the very original evening ensemble sketched herewith. The top of the dress is of white crepe romain, while the rest of the model is of the same material in chartreuse. Here can be seen the princess silhouette with a Directoire feeling. Diagonal seams and gores fit the frock over the hips and bosom and the lower part of the skirt is cut with a wide flare and panel in deep folds. At the back of the bodice the yellow crepe runs up to a point in the middle of the neckline. The cape is of chartreuse romain bordered with marlen. The ends terminate in long ends which are twisted round the waistline and tied in back. An original idea is that of putting revers on the front of the cape exactly as if it were a jacket. The caped evening ensemble done on these lines is very much liked here for early spring wear.

The Men's Glee Club of the University of Pittsburgh gave its annual home concert in Carnegie Music Hall last night, with a larger audience than formerly. That fact, with the increasing number of excellent musical works on the program, is a fair sign of the growth of musical appreciation at Pitt.

The outstanding features of the club's singing are precision and vigorous rhythms. But such husky lads surely can contribute a larger tone and more humor.

The enchanting choruses from "Patience" were happy only because of Gilbert's rollicking lines, and much of the other music was somewhat monotonous. The "Reaper's Song" was an exception and the Negro hymn "When Gabriel Blows His Horn" as well, in which Harry Parker, baritone soloist, sang with a real sincere feeling for the setting and the music.

Renee Nizan, Parisian organist, played a group of characteristic music for organ solo, proving herself an exceptional artist. She has a fine talent for brilliant and profound playing.

Her Bach has the breadth of the classics and her moderns give her opportunity for most colorful registration. She has besides a charming personality and a flair for concert playing.

Dr. W. H. Wright, directed the chorus and Wesley Linsenbigler with Robert R. McConnell were accompanists.

British Jealous Of Our Taxes? Send 'Em Over

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Do you know that the British are jealous of our taxes?

We'll be fair about it. They can have 'em.

An Englishman gives up twenty per cent of everything he earns and most of what he can borrow.

An American in the lower brackets is practically immune to confiscatory punishment.

If you earn two thousand a year and have a wife you pay the government nothing.

But you gives the wife everything.

Oh well, those good old islanders. They said Americans were dollar dizzy.

Now, we have the dime deliriums.

We'll see you in the higher brackets.

Congress Home Group Has Record Attendance

By far the largest meeting ever held by the home department of the Congress of Clubs was that which took place yesterday at the H. J. Heinz plant. One hundred and fourteen members and guests of the department met for luncheon and later adjourned to the attractive demonstration auditorium, which, with its complete kitchen-rostrum, was a most appropriate "home" setting for the meeting.

After welcoming her constituents Mrs. Evelyn Gardiner Saudek, department chairman, introduced Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, Congress president, and Mrs. John M. Phillips, first vice president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, both of whom spoke briefly. Mrs. Charles M. Bregg, club editor of the Sun-Telegraph, told how a woman manages both a career and a home and Miss Josephine Gibson completed the program with an engaging and appetizing demonstration of a spring luncheon. Selections on the big auditorium organ prefaced a tour of the plant.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., April 2, 1932.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

It takes a baby to stir the sympathy and interest of a hard-boiled nation. From the time that baby fell into the mine drill hole, 'til we got the papers to see if they had saved him, why we didn't care any more what Congress did than they do themselves. Maybe this means a good omen for the Lindbergh baby. Anyone else that has a clue don't mention it to the press or public 'til after you get the baby. You will get enough publicity after that to last a lifetime. Yours, WILL.

DEMAND SAFETY AT CROSSINGS 260 MOTORISTS HELD IN DRIVE

Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport, yesterday demanded that the city Council act at once to provide protection at 26 or more unguarded railroad crossings in the city. He pointed to the long list of deaths at crossings, citing in particular that of Genevieve Barkemeyer, a high school girl, on the Ninth street crossing of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Tuesday.

Preceding the meeting the Mayor conferred with City Solicitor Harry M. Jones and Traffic Inspector J. Harrison Newling. Two plans were advanced, that of asking the Baltimore and Ohio to provide full time watchmen and that the city appeal to the Public Service Commission for relief.

Council voted to confer with railroad officials next week.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Hollywood is better acquainted with the feud between the two William Boyds. The most recent victory was chalked up by the Boyd who went from the New York stage to the magic lanterns. Neither will give in about changing their handles, although the movie one is now dubbed Bill Boyd on the coast.

The other day he was approached by a theatrical solicitor. He took an ad.

"How will you describe yourself," asked the solicitor, "so they'll know which one you are?"

"Just say William Boyd, the Star!" was the answer.

When the stage Boyd heard of it, he said:

"Just identify me this way: 'William Boyd, the Actor, not the star.'"

Gag!

Before the Hollywood Theater charged $2 a seat for vaudeville, the admission tariff was 85 cents for movies. A former customer who didn't know the policy had changed from movies to straight vaudeville planked down $1.70 for two seats.

When he was told that two seats would cost him $4, he confessed that he didn't have another penny, and started to withdraw his coin. The box officer said: Just a minute," and then called Harry Warner, one of the owners, explained what had happened, and asked for instructions.

"Take the $1.70," said Warner, "and get his notes for the rest."

Oop!

Mr. Sam E. Whitmire, one of the better reporters, hastens to argue that "hot-cha" is not Italian and doesn't mean hot meat. In the Orient, and even in the California gaming houses, "cha" means tea, and Whitmire recalls how in the old days all play was stopped while "hot cha" was served.

Well, we are getting somewhere. The Italians first, and now the Orientals claim the popular expression, Broadway, however, which adopted it, uses it to exemplify "hot stuff."

Next?

By Way of Report

The recent suit for damages, hurled at Al Jolson by a woman in the West, is better understood by comedians who depend a lot on what is known as a "local." The "intimate" entertainers Jolson, Wynn, Cantor, Holtz, Jessel et al., go in for the "local" a lot. What would get a howl at the Palace, frinstance, wouldn't click in Perris or Thief River Falls, Minnesota, unless the gag was pinned on to a towner, one who has been the goat for a quip in that locality before.

When a comic gets to a new town, he always asks the stage manager, the house manager or the leader for a "name" that could be tagged on to a laugh. The action brought by the woman against Jolson probably will arouse the booking executives to halt this form of ragging—whether the woman wins or not.

Will Rogers, perhaps, is the only clown who can get away with it. When he was once asked how he successfully kidded big people, Rogers replied:

"Because I only kid BIG people."

Miss Gaynor In Scrap Again

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, April 2.

She may be diminutive, but Janet Gaynor is always ready to scrap for a principle.

I have a hot tip that the tiny star is once more at odds with Fox, having refused for a week to appear in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Janet contends her next role, or preferably her next two, should lean a little more towards sophistication. She points to Daddy Longlegs, Merely Mary Ann and Delicious, her last three pictures, and all of the sweetly sentimental type.

It isn't her wish to depart permanently from this kind of role; in fact, she's willing to do Rebecca later on. But she is very firm in her refusal to do it now.

My informant who seems pretty close to the situation, doesn't believe the argument will lead to an open break between star and company. Both Janet and Fox suffered too much from that other feud, which kept her off the screen for so long.

It is just possible that unless Janet can be persuaded to change her mind, the studio may yield a point.

HERE'S GOSSIP

Nina Wilcox Putnam, the author, almost lost the sight in one eye in an unusual accident at Catalina. She was using a curling iron which slipped and seared the pupil of her left eye. Specialists were dubious at first, but now tell her the sight is not injured. She must keep the eye in a bandage however for several days yet.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., is back in town looking pretty well, despite his recent illness in New York. He tells me R. C. Sheriff is due here tonight to adapt the Eric Maria Remarque story, "The Way Back." This is the "All Quiet" sequel, which Universal bought from the author's proofs many months ago.

Caryl Lincoln, baby star, who recently said goodbye to her marriage, will play Harpo Marx's running mate in "Horse Feathers."

I hear from Chicago that Louise Fazenda went over well in her first personal appearance. Those ex-college magazine editors had their first luncheon at Al Levy's tavern yesterday, elected Groucho Marx as their new president and agreed that the club hereafter shall be known as "The Westside Asthma and Riding Club, parent organization of the Ombay Cycle Association of America, which is affiliated with the North American Citrus Peelers Guild." And that I hope is final.

Tarzan Wins Fair Bride In Penn

By GEORGE SIEBEL

Adventurous youth crowded the Penn theater from pit to dome yesterday and sprawled in the aisles giving three cheers for Darwin every time Tarzan the Ape Man put his stiletto into another wicked lion or wily tiger. The simian epic of Edgar Rice Burroughs' the anthropoid Homer has been turned into a grand drama of thrills with Hagenbeck and Rinling furnishing most of the cast. Except Tarzan, of course, in whom we recognize Johnny Weissmuller, diving from trees as tall as the Cathedral of Learning into streams inhabited by raging hippos and ravenous crocodiles.

Mr. Seibel

Johnny Tarzan doesn't get a scratch in all his wild fights with jungle monsters; a high-power rifle merely gives him a little headache; life in the jungle doesn't even put a sun-tan on his classic profile. No wonder Maureen O'Sullivan, who is called Jane as the daughter of C. Aubrey Smith, a Scotch trader, is willing to teach him English in exchange for swimming lessons. Maureen also has that heroic complexion and temporary immortality which enables people from Hollywood to defy mosquitos and other savage terrors of the forests primeval.

You have never seen a blood-thirstier menagerie of beasts with wide-open maws get so little food. Nor have you ever seen a prompter lot of monsters—these lions, tigers, crocodiles, gorillas, leopards, etc., make their entrances and exits without ever missing a cue. But the Elephants are best of all. Tarzan Weissmuller need only blow his police whistle, and the whole Zoo comes to the rescue. They are not only police force and ambulance brigade, but P. R. R. When the savage natives get troublesome, the Elephants come and tear down their kraals. One herd of those Elephants commanded by Tarzan, would have stopped the war in Asia.

A perfectly grand time was had by all. Hurrah for Darwin and Johnny Weissmuller! Let's all go to find the Graveyard of the Elephants! The stage-show looked like a flea circus after such doings. Africa is the place to have fun, but it is somewhat of a disappointment not to see Tarzan chasing the crocodiles. Why not?

Warner Film 'Shopworn'

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Shopworn," starring Barbara Stanwyck, opened in the Warner yesterday. And its theme is just that: shopworn.

Anyway, it is about a girl who wants to be good and about a boy who has one of those selfish, interfering mothers.

The boy and girl are in love and happy. Then mother enters. She wrecks the romance right. The girl lands in one of those reform institutions where naughty girls are supposed to learn how to be good by scrubbing floors. And the boy goes to Europe.

The girl comes out into the bright sunshine again with a new slant on things. It's everyone for themselves in this old world, she thinks. So she sets out to take good care of herself. Eventually she ends up a glamorous stage star and into her life comes her old sweetheart.

But the mamma's still on the job, and for a second time it looks as if the romance will go puff. However, the happs fade-out arrives.

Regis Toomey handles the hero role. Zasu Pitts brightens things up a lot with comedy bits. And Miss Stanwyck does what she can with her part, but even her hysterics appear a bit shopworn.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Two of the players in the cast supporting Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" have played with that actress in other productions. When this Rudolf Besier play about the romance of the Poets Browning is seen in the Alvin next week three members of the Barrett family will be Miss Cornell, Charles Waldron and Margalo Gillmore. The latter appeared in support of Miss Cornell in "The Green Hat" and Mr. Waldron played in Clemence Dane's "A Bill of Divorcement," in which Miss Cornell had her first important role in New York.

* * *

More big musical comedies and operettas will follow on the heels of "Three's a Crowd" as condensed production for "presentations" in the greater cinemas that combine shadow and flesh entertainment in their bills. Both RKO and Loew's will take up production of tabloid musicals, those of the latter organization to be under the supervision of Louis K. Sidney, formerly of Pittsburgh. Its first will be a boiled-down version of "The Desert Song," purchased from the original producers, Schwab and Mandel. Two of these shorter musicoms, "Three's a Crowd" and "Girl Crazy," now are playing in New York.

* * *

"Sensation," fillim co-featuring Edmund Lowe and Claudette Colbert, will reach the screen as "The Misleading Lady." When Fatty Arbuckle steps out in a St. Louis cinema late in April it will be as an m. c. the engagement being for three weeks. Another title change: "But the Flesh is Weak," subbed for "The Truth Game," starring Robert Montgomery. "Rain," which was "Miss Sadie Thompson" for Gloria Swanson as a silent fillim, will be "Rain" as a talkie for Tallulah Bankhead, according to some Hollywood prophets. And Walter Conolly, seen here this season with Helen Hayes in "The Good Fairy," is talked about for a part in it. Clara Bow could "come back" by just nodding her head, according to Hollywood gossips, who say several producers would like to sign her. Sally Starr, Pittsburgh lass who has been in musicoms and fillims, will act in "Angels Don't Kiss," comedy drama to open in New York April 5. "The Kid From Spain" is the title of Eddie Cantor's next fillim, a musical.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

SAM, A DEALER in luggage, was driving through one of those numerous towns that dot the Hudson on the way to New York. According to Leonard Lyons, it is Sam's story that he really wasn't going very rapidly—but that's only his story. I imagine that, if he hadn't been exceeding the speed limit, that grim-looking motorcycle cop would never have stopped him. Or am I wrong again?

At any rate, the usual thing happened. The little boy in the blue suit pulled abreast of Sam's car, gave his siren a delicate twist and wagged his finger in the "pull over" high sign. Sam put on his brakes, pulled out his wallet and began to sort out all the cards that had been given him to display in case he was ever stopped by a motorcycle policeman.

Here's my license, officer," he chirped, "but you don't want to give me a ticket. Look, here's a card from the president of my lodge. He knows a very prominent judge who—"

"Gimme your license," interrupted the cop, "and don't talk so much."

Sam gulped.

"All right," he muttered, "but you're making a mistake. Why I know everybody. Jimmy Walker and me are like this. Judge Seabury is related to a cousin of mine on my wife's side. I own a piano on which Irving Berlin once composed some music. I—"

The officer waved his pencil.

"If you don't stop talkin' so much," he advised, "I'll not only give you a ticket, but I'll run you in as well. I don't care if you're President Hoover's whole cabinet—and I don't want to know anything about any of your friends."

"All I know is that you were ridin' along at 50 miles an hour and makin' the highway unsafe for pedestrian traffic. And you're gonna get a pretty little ticket."

The luggage man sat quietly as the cop wrote. Suddenly he leaned forward and tried once more.

"Listen, officer," he asserted, "I own a nice luggage store in New York. Here's my business card. If you'll drop into my store whenever you're in New York I'll be very happy to make you a special price on anything you might need."

The patrolman closed his book with a snap. He glanced at the card.

"Okay, Sam," he said. "Why didn't you say that in the first place?" . . .

Just about a week later the cop walked into Sam's store. He slapped the proprietor on the back in a very jovial fashion.

"Here I am, big boy," he announced. "I'm taking a vacation with some of my pals, and I'd like to get fixed up with a nice bag. Guess you can fix me up all right, eh?"

Sam nodded. He walked to the rear of the store and returned with a black bag.

"Here's something that I recommend very highly," he said. "You can take my word for the fact that it's the best article in the store. It's worth plenty of money—but as a special favor for what you did for me, I'll let you have it for $18."

The cop examined it carefully, asked a few questions, like it immensely and told Sam he'd take it. He paid the $18 in cash, thanked Sam extensively and left. The moment he walked out Sam went into a loud laugh and turned to his assistant.

"How do you like that?" he grinned. "There's the best laugh of the season. That policeman came in for a favor, and did you see what I did? I took the $12 tag out of the black bag and charged him $18 for it. And he fell for it! Ho, ho, ho."

The assistant shook his head. "That's bad business, Sam," he said. "It may be a joke now, but it can get you into trouble. Suppose he finds out he's been gypped and comes back here?"

"Don't worry," replied Sam confidently. "He won't find out anything. We've seen the last of him."

Exactly two days later, at the same hour, the cop returned. With him was another officer in uniform, and one of the toughest looking babies you'd ever want to see. Sam wet his lips and closed his eyes. He had a very definite hunch that something was going to happen to him. And, as luck would have it, he was all alone in the store.

The motorcycle cop walked right up to him.

"Look here, you," he barked. "Do you remember that black bag you sold me the other day; the one I gave you $18 for?"

Sam was barely able to nod his head.

"Y-y-yes," he replied feebly. "Is there—is there something wrong?"

The officer shook his head and motioned to the other cop.

"I should say not," he replied, "but I'm gonna trouble you just once more. As a special favor to me, could you sell another bag just like it to my friend here at the same price?" . . .

"IN THE turf game," writes Bruce Morrison, from Chicago, "there are plenty of unusual things happening all the time. I suppose that most of these incidents cannot be used by you, but here's one that might fit in.

"One of the 'regulars' had been incarcerated in a bastile adjacent to the track on some minor offense and there was a hurried call for assistance. After several days of scurrying about, a couple of his pals finally raised the $1,000 bail and approached the brother in distress.

"'We've come,' they reported gleefully, 'to get you out of the jug.' And said jug, Mark, was a plenty foul-smelling place.

"Imagine their embarrassment when the other man replied:

"'I don't want to get out of here. I'm making book and doing better than I ever did on the outside. I'm cleaning up on these mugs who think they know the horses.'

"'But,' queried one of the good samaritans, 'how about the warden? Won't he queer your game when he finds you taking bets?'

"'I should say not,' cracked our hero. 'The poor sap has his own $2 riding on every race!'"

A PRESS agent, famous for his lack of interesting material, walked into the office of a local dramatic editor the other afternoon.

"Just dropped in to say goodby, John," he chirped breezily. "I've stepped out of the press agent racket and I'm hitting for the Coast."

The dramatic editor failed to look up from his work.

"Marvelous," he growled. "I want to congratulate you. That's the first real news you've given me in two years!" . . .

SOME OF the Broadway boys were discussing horses, brandy and liquor the other night. A powerful figure in the underworld drifted off into a detailed memory of a damsel he had courted in other days. She is now, incidentally, a famous movie star.

"You were crazy about her, were you not, Bill?" asked one of the others.

The racketeer nodded thoughtfully.

"Absolutely crazy," he replied. "Why, I was so daffy about her that I once followed her to Africa just to tell her that I didn't love her!" . . .

Steeplechase In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The most thrilling and likewise the most dangerous horse race in the world, England's famous Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, is pictured with all its breathtaking thrills in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. More than 500,000 turf fans, including the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, attended the classic, and Metrotone cameramen, in addition to gathering all the thrills of the race, obtained remarkable crowd shots and intimate glimpses of the two princes.

Thirty-six horses started in the race, with only nine finishing, and there were many exciting spills, some directly in front of the camera. Forbra, a 50-1 shot, captured the spectacular race. The thrilling scenes are accompanied by a graphic description by the Globe Trotter.

BOXERS IN ACTION

New York City amateur boxers defeated the best from Chicago in an inter-city tournament at Madison Square Garden. Among the most exciting of the bouts were those between Johnny deFoe and Leo Rodak, Barney Smith and Billy Celebron and George Commerton and Gene Klopack, with the latter's victory for Chicago furnishing a terrific climax to some of the greatest contests ever staged in Madison Square Garden.

"Just add a little soap," is the slogan at Rotura, New Zealand. That's what they do to a previously quiescent geyser, which almost instantly is transformed into a regular "Old Faithful." It's one of the marvels of nature.

Clyde Beatty, famous lion trainer, who was badly mangled by Nero, one of his most dangerous charges, has just left the hospital and returns to his exciting work at Peru, Ind. The ugly tempered Nero is the first of a score of lions to again dispute his authority. After a half hour's effort, however, Beatty has Nero figuratively eating out of his hand.

PLUMPNESS IS GONE

German working girls and housewives no longer possess that plumpness that formerly was quite typical of Teutonic femininity. How they get rid of it by so-called rhythmic exercises, is shown.

Despite its war, Japan has time to play, and the regular baseball season has already started. There are pictures of two of the leading big league teams in action at Tokio. The boys show amazing skill, and, incidentally, the word of the umpire is absolute there, even as it is here.

Old-time fiddlers hold a jamboree at Star, N. C. They're in rare form and bring back the days before jazz swept the nation.

Local Author's Play In Tech Theater

"Who'll Take Papa," a new play by Harriette Avery Gaul, Pittsburgh author, will be given in the Theater of the College of Fine Arts, Carnegie Institute of Technology, for six nights beginning tonight. Other performances will be April 4, 5, 7 and 9.

It will be presented by the Tech department of drama under the direction of Chester Wallace.

Women to Honor Palestine Leader

A public reception will be held tonight at the Y. M. and W. H. A. in honor of Goldie Myerson, woman leader in Palestine. She will be guest of the Pioneer Women's Organization.

Western!

Jackie Cooper goes Western—but just to please the photographer. His next screen appearance will be in "Limpy," under Harry Pollard's direction.

Wise Woman In Davis

"The Wiser Sex," which was reviewed here Thursday as the Enright screen feature, opened on the Davis screen yesterday for a week's downtown showing. The title, one assumes, is intended to signify that feminine wits are the sharpest. Anyway, one sees Claudette Colbert, a society gal, coming to the conclusion that her sweetie, Melvyn Douglas, who wants to clean up the town, and gets into a jam, has been "framed" on a murder charge. So she dons a blonde wig, pretends to be a different sort of girl, and matches her wits against those of a real blonde, Lilyan Tashman. Claudette wins. In the cast prominently is William (Stage) Boyd as a gangster.

March Plays Twins in Stanley

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Strangers in Love," a drama of twin brothers, with the mistaken identity angle present, opened yesterday on the Stanley screen. It is based on William J. Locke's story, "The Shorn Lamb."

Frederic March, who did so well with his recent Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde, goes in for the double exposures in early sequence of "Strangers in Love" portraying both brothers and talking back to himself, as it were.

One brother is a wealthy archeologist, miserly and unscrupulous in his business dealings. The other is a sort of family black sheep, who turns up after the years, and the sight of him causes the wealthy brother, who has a weak heart, to drop over dead.

A DEAD MAN LIVES

Rather than let the estate go to further perpetuation of Egyptian mummies, the prodigal son steps into his dead brother's shoes and his business of fooling the public begins.

It is an entertaining picture with Mr. March doing another finished portrayal, and the film's melodramatic trend being stemmed with the comedy and farcial situations that result when the one brother masquerades as the other.

An efficient supporting cast, which includes Kay Francis, Juliette Compton, Stuart Erwin and George Barbier, is on hand. And the finale brings happiness to all concerned, which is as it should be, for the masquerading black sheep is really a grand fellow.

ON THE STAGE

Rubinoff and his violin is the big feature of the stage bill. With clenched fists, Rubinoff directs the overture, and he seems to wring the music right out of those musicians. Later, on the stage, he offers several solo selections, paying a tribute to the late Victor Herbert. He was enthusiastically received yesterday.

Dick Powell puts on a pleasant song act, with Bernie Armstrong at the piano. Three acrobats whirl through the air and hand out thrills. Two funny fellows go in for the dance and the slapstick—and that's the long and the short of it! A blonde girl sings and the Stanley ensemble goes through the paces.

LISTENING IN—With the Radio Editor

B. C. FORBES, business authority and writer of the most widely-published newspaper financial column in the country, appearing daily and Sunday in the Sun-Telegraph, speaks over a nation-wide NBC network, including KDKA, on the greatest economic question of the day, "What Lies Ahead?" at 7:45 o'clock tonight. Mr. Forbes' address will be carried by shortwave to other countries. It is based on a complete survey of key industries and interviews with financial and industrial leaders of the country.

A second broadcast on the subject of America's immediate economic future has been announced by NBC to be given by Merryle Stanley Rukeyser, another noted financial authority, whose comments appear daily in the Sun-Telegraph, over a coast-to-coast hookup next Saturday at 7:45 p. m.

B. C. FORBES, FINANCIAL EXPERT . . . KDKA AT 7:45 TONIGHT

Leopold Stokowski concludes his series of Philadelphia Orchestra broadcasts with a program on WJAS from 8:15 to 10 tonight. He presents a program devoted entirely to works of contemporary American composers, thus rounding out his "history of music," which has included Gluck, Handel, Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms, Wagner and the modern Russians.

Beginning April 12, a new program sponsored by H. J. Heinz Company will be heard every Tuesday and Thursday at 6:45 p. m. over a Columbia chain of 50 stations, including WJAS. Although the exact nature of the presentation has not been divulged, it is understood that the feature will be a sketch of real life situations with comedy and pathos intermingled. The announcement follows a secret audition 10 days ago, when special lines were run into the Heinz offices here from New York.

Program Pointers

JEANNETTE McDONALD, songster of the stage and screen, is co-starred with four other motion picture celebrities in a broadcast from a Hollywood movie set during WCAE's Dance Hour at 10 tonight with Walter Winchell and Jimmy Grier's orchestra. Featured with Miss McDonald are Maurice Chevalier, Genevieve Tobin, Charles Ruggles and Ernest Lubitsch, the director. The screen stars are heard from Hollywood, Winchell from New York and Grier from Los Angeles. . . . Next Saturday night, incidentally, the magic carpet makes a three-point landing at Pittsburgh for the music of Wayne King's orchestra playing at the Anatole Club ball at the Hotel Schenley.

The Three Rolling Stones, a male trio directed by Dick Whetstone, are featured with Dolores Pachera, singer of "torch" songs, on KQV's DX Revel for dial twisting fans from 1 a. m. to 2:30.

The story of the work of the American Red Cross during the Mississippi flood of 1927 is dramatized during the Danger Fighters' program at 8 over KDKA.

Three prominent Pittsburgh artists are brought together in a new series of ginger ale programs on WJAS at 5:45. They are Russell Smith, Joe Falvo and Luke Riley, who play 16 instruments among them, and sing, as well.

The Pickens Sisters, the harmony trio of Southern girls who made their radio debut less than a month ago, are co-featured with Andy Sanella, saxophone virtuoso, Harold van Emburgh, baritone, and William Wirges' orchestra over WCAE at 9:30.

The grand opening of the General Motors Show at Motor Square Garden with music by Don Bester and his band is broadcast by WWSW at 7:30 and again at 9:30.

New and old tunes are contrasted by Guy Lombardo and his orchestra over WJAS at 7:30. Included are "Moonlight and Roses" and "Rain on the Roof."

HAL KEMP, the popular orchestra leader who starts with his band as Don Bestor's successor today, has just completed an engagement at the exclusive Daffydill Club . . . Other triumphs by Hal and his band were achieved at the Cafe de Paris, London, and Les Ambassadeurs, Paris . . . When Bullneck Mooseface and Andy, of Amos 'n' Andy, staged their battle of the century, did you hear them fall to the mat? Bullneck was a telephone directory tied with strings and Andy was a felt and leather padded board . . . Ruth Etting, one of radio's highest paid entertainers, recalls the time when she was singing in Chicago for $5 a night . . . George Beuchler, Columbia announcer, has just acquired a pedigreed Scotch terrier, and Jane Gibson, WJAS stylist, has something rare in the way of dogs—a fawn colored bulldog.

Want to Look Young?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Learn the Reason If You Can Not Command Respect

Are big business bozos just lurking wolves, waiting to devour Li'l Red Riding Hood?

Phyllis wants to know. Phyllis—to hear her tell it—is trying her daggone best to be an honest working girl.

But why does the boss always try to kiss her and date her up for wild parties?

Honest she's not a flirt. She's a girl trying to get ahead, and she never encourages any of them. I think she's a Bright Lamp Before Me yet—

"It happens when she walks. And I don't understand it because I'm one I know and go out with away from business always treat me with respect.

What's your guess, Stratford?

ANNOYED BY BOSS

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I want to ass you something. I am a young girl who goes out a great deal with nice young men, and I'm always treated with the highest regard and respect by them, but it seems that I can't get the same respect from the men I come in contact with in business. Why is it?

"I kept my first position for four years, but was forced to leave recently because of the many attempts that my employer made to kiss me and hold my hand while I was in his office taking dictation. I've never encouraged him one bit, and I kept continually telling him that if he didn't see fit to treat me like a lady he could consider my resignation.

"He'd apologize, and then after a week's time he would start it all over again. The crowning blow was when he asked me to go away for a week-end with him, making up all sorts of lies for me to tell my folks.

MET SAME TROUBLE

"I only laughed at him and told him he was making a monkey of himself. He was so humiliated that he didn't know what to say when I told him that. When he came back to himself he told me that he promised himself every morning on the way to the office that he would be strictly business with me, but that just as soon as he looked at me he couldn't help himself. He then told me that even the buyers had asked him to fix it up with me, but that he always told them to keep hands off because I was a good girl.

Well, I finally left. I found another job the very next day, and it wasn't two months till I had to contend with the same thing. As much as I needed my job, I quit. I got another the same week, and everything was lovely till my boss decided to celebrate Christmas and thought it would be grand to begin with me. I shamed him so much that I don't believe he'll try anything again.

But will you please tell me why my employers get so fresh when I don't offer them any encouragement whatsoever, and the boys I go out with treat me so nicely? PHYLLIS

SHOULD STUDY SELF

Well, I dunno, youngster. I don't know you, and I don't know these men you've worked for. But I do know that most bosses are just as decent as your own dad or your brother, if you have one, or these kids you go out with.

You may have just happened to land jobs with the wrong kind, but I suspect that there's something wrong with your office technique.

Do you act kittenish? Do you dress as if you were going to a party? Do you use too much war paint? Do you try to get by on "sex appeal?" Do you giggle and look helpless?

If I were you I'd look myself over, Phyllis, and I'd look the other girls over—the girls who go on about their work with no foolishness, and don't hang out signs to catch roving eyes, and are not always running into bad hombres.

I'd size myself up, and then I'd cut out whatever it is that makes these men get you wrong, for nine-tenths of the time the way you're treated is up to you.

At least, that's my hunch.

What's yours, stratter?

'RENDEZVOUS'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"A meeting—an appointment" . . . "A meeting" sounds the best—the most poignant, the most meaningful. But alas! the rendezvous of young lovers whom you see waiting for and joining one another in the big town, is the other word: just an "appointment." No one but they themselves, or the story-writer, sees any aura of romance about their rendezvous. For it comes about in a crowd, always a crowd, and noise. The whole city sees the eager young things meet with shining eyes. The whole city raises its voice about them and goes on about its clamorous business. They meet alone in the presence of a thousand strangers. Sometimes—I've seen them—they dare to kiss a greeting, but it is snatched, shame-faced, in a panic, and they go off together feeling like the famed goldfish! They eat their dinner gaily with more company. Then the treat of a theater—the whole world is again "in on" their rendezvous! Only if it happens to be movies is there a remoteness, a loneliness, to their companionship. And there Jack and Jill can clasp hands and look sometimes into one another's darkly shining eyes and whisper an endearing word without being overheard and seen by the great ears and the round eyes of the multitude!

But a "meeting!" There only the giants of the world, the rocks, the trees, the waters, the canops of grand blue sky, the casual kindly beast, the winds, hear what lovers say, see the caress they venture!

Among the solemn, quiet, indifferent but kind, giants of Nature is the only true rendezvous!—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

Thanks for Wedding Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper to send "thank-you" cards to relatives and friends for wedding gifts after you have already thanked the donors personally? S.

Yes. For every gift that the bride receives she writes a note of thanks, even if she happens to thank the giver personally. These gifts are very important, and a casual or chance thank you is not enough.

And ready made "thank-you" cards should not be used. I am not sure if you refer to this kind, but I do want to add this suggestion. The note of thank-you should be written by the bride-to-be, and the engraved or printed card won't do.

A Matter of Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Are nose veils strictly an afternoon accessory, or may they be worn in the evening?

2. Will an egg-shell transparent velvet Sunday night dress be appropriate for this summer? I have planned to wear a velvet turban to match. W.

1. Nose veils are an afternoon dress accessory.

2. I believe that you will find that the transparent velvet dress, and certainly with the velvet turban, very inappropriate for summer wear. Nowadays summer clothes are so delightfully cool-looking, with so many kinds of summery materials, that I fear you will look very "wintry" in velvet.

Acknowledge All Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Once again I come to you for help. Your column is a wonderful aid to me, and I am sure that you will again give me your help in solving several problems that are bothering me.

1. First, I am being married in May, and my sister wishes to give a shower, inviting only my close friends. Would this be proper.

2. Is this type of stationery proper for social correspondence, and for acknowledging gifts, or is the plain white standard size more suitable?

3. Should all gifts . . . birthday, shower, holiday, and so forth . . . be acknowledged by note? BETH.

1. In the last event you will have to use your own judgment about having so close a relative as a sister plan a shower for you. You know, dear girl, that there will always be some people who will "wonder" about this sort of plan, for you must admit that it is a fairly obvious bid for gifts. Showers are more acceptable if they are planned by a very close friend of the bride's, or by her club, and attended by close friends. But for a mother or a sister to plan one . . . well, there is certainly food for thought about that.

2. I like your letter-paper, and it forms a charming background for your handwriting. It is a good size for "notes," and for fairly generous-sized notes at that, and the small brown line on the border is quite attractive. It would be especially charming monogrammed with a monogram of a color to match the border. Have you thought of having that done? The paper itself is of excellent quality . . . as the water mark testifies.

3. Yes, every gift we receive should be acknowledged with a note.

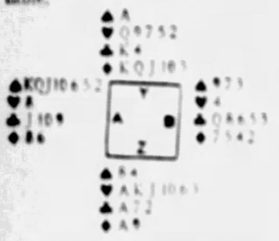
Slam Bidding Made Easy

Feature showing takes the guess out of bidding slams. The following hand shows how simple the operation is, and how definite the information is that two experts can pass across the table.



Z made an opening semi-forcing bid of 2-Hearts, which A overcalled with 2-Spades. Y bid 3-Spades. This was full of information for Z. First of all, is this rule. Provided your partner has made an opening bid, your bid of a suit previously named by an opponent states two things—that you hold no losing cards of that suit and that you hold unusual support for partner's suit.

B passed. Y's bid of 3-Spades was a demand upon Z to show features. He must first show his lowest side ace. Z did this by bidding 4-Clubs. This bid did not in the least mean that Z wanted to play clubs. Had he desired to show that he held a second suit as good as the one he had first bid, Z would have made an unnecessarily high bid of 5-Clubs, thereby announcing possession of a powerful two-suiter. The bid of 4-Clubs merely meant: Partner, I hold the ace of clubs."

Lacking the ace of diamonds, Y bid 5-Clubs. This repetition of a side suit bid previously named by his partner stated that Y held the K of clubs. Reassured by Y's bid, Z next bid 5-Diamonds, stating that he held the ace of the suit named.

Reviewing his partner's bids, Y definitely knew that no trick could be lost in either clubs or diamonds. From his own hand Y knew that no spade trick could be lost, barring the slight possibility that B could trump an opening lead of that suit. The only suit capable of losing a trick appeared to be hearts. It was possible that Z had bid 2-Hearts upon six headed by A-J-10, which might give one opponent or the other the K-X in trumps. Missing a sure small slam by bidding a questionable grand slam is not safe procedure. Y was a very cautious bidder. He could sweat that a small slam could be won on a spread of hands. He was not positive that a grand slam could be spread. His bid 6-Hearts over his partner's declaration of 5-Diamonds. This bid stated that contracting to date assured a small slam, and Y's bid also inquired: "Partner, how good are your hearts?"

Z understood perfectly the meaning of his partner's small slam bid. That Z's announcements of holding both minor aces enabled Y to see that a small slam was assured, even if Z held something like six hearts to A-J or K-J-10. Y could not know that Z had six hearts headed by A-K, hence his failure to risk bidding a grand slam. It was Z's business to show his trump strength by bidding the grand slam, and Z ended contracting with his bid of 7-Hearts.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

When a Child Has Stomach Ache, Look for the Reason

Stomach ache in a child may mean something or nothing. Nervous mothers vision appendicitis or some other dire disease at the first complaint of stomach ache. Mothers with stronger nerves are apt to ignore the symptom and say, "Oh! it's nothing probably a little indigestion."

Dr. Copeland

The proper course is to investigate the matter. If examination of the abdomen shows marked tenderness on the right side, particularly at a point midway between the navel and the hip bone, the proper thing to do is to send for the doctor.

Appendicitis in children lacks the three "classical signs" of that disease in grownups. These are pain, tenderness and stiffness of the wall of the abdomen on the right side. This stiffness or rigidity is usually lacking in the young, unless the case is far advanced. The pain may be slight, but the tenderness is always present. Moderate fever, accompanied by vomiting and constipation complete a picture which should arouse suspicion.

Bear in mind that the very worst treatment of an appendicitis attack is a dose of physic!

But with colic it is just the other way. Rapid eating, with insufficient chewing of food, taking improper food and constipation are factors, any one of which may cause an attack of colic. In these cases a cathartic, hot applications to the abdomen and abstinence from food for a few hours will usually restore the little patient to health.

Certain children, particularly the offspring of nervous parents, may become interested in and unduly apprehensive regarding their own health. They constitute a problem, and it takes some study to make sure just what is wrong.

A slight cold involving the throat and nose may be accompanied by severe reflex pain in the region of the navel. In such a case constipation may be present, but there is no abdominal tenderness. The aim should be to relieve the constipation and to divert the patient's attention from himself.

"Mucus colic" is a form of trouble common in nervous children. They are likely to experience severe pain during the early morning hours. There is no tenderness of the abdomen. These cases should be under the care of a physician.

In various diseases of the chest and throat, reflex pain may be a prominent symptom. Acute heart failure and tonsilitis are not uncommon causes of reflex abdominal discomfort.

Care of the abdomen should be begun in infancy. No tight binder should constrict the baby's abdomen, as such an outfit tends to push the organs of digestion out of their proper places.

Constipation in an infant should never remain uncorrected. The beginning of many a serious disorder may be traced to this cause.

The muscles of the abdomen should be strengthened by gymnastic exercises, such as lying on the back and flexing the legs on the abdomen. Creeping is a useful way to keep the abdomen healthy. This muscle work may be practiced as a form of play. This has proved a very popular amusement with many children.

Inexpensive and effective is a mild bleach which is compounded by mixing together four ounces of rubbing alcohol, two ounces of stronger rose-water and 15 drops of simple tincture of benzoin. Apply with cotton and let dry on the skin.

Bangs are becoming popular again. Sometimes it is only a half portion, a little wisp on the left side to fill in the forehead gap that is left by the side parting. Curling fluid makes bangs behave. Slather it on good and plenty, comb the fringe straight down over the forehead, give the ends a slanting line and push in a marcel pattern with the fingers laid flat. When curling fluid is used the hirsute curtain on the brow will retain its design until the shampoo comes along and suits it.

Sulphur ointment is an old tried-and-true remedy for facial eruptions, though it may not work in all cases. Ointment of zinc oxide is also healing. Before applying either of these, bathe the face with warm water and a bland soap, rinsing first with warm water then with cold.

Not much can be done to change the shape of the hands, but their surfaces respond quickly and eagerly to a little attention. Cosmetic jellies that dry immediately after application can be used several times a day and the roughness will disappear. Ragged cuticle about the finger nails can be overcome by using a cream every night, lifting the flesh away from the nail structure. Massage will often reduce large knuckles.

There is a French bluing that can be bought in many beauty shops and at some drug stores, the purpose of which is to bleach yellow streaks from white hair. It has a purple cast and imparts a lovely shimmering silver effect to the sisters who carry cotton-colored halos atop their heads.

No woman should fail to keep her complexion, neck and hands well oiled. Lubricating the skin surface retards the shedding of scales which condition causes roughness and invites wrinkles. Oily cosmetics perform as protective agents against dust, harsh winds and strong sunlight. Whether or not they actually feed the tissues, supply them with nourishment, is a question that is disputed by the disputers in the medical profession.

Comradeship With Children

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

It seems to me that we must very often make children feel that they are in a strange world all by themselves of which we have no understanding, no sympathy. We are so eternally "right" in our demands, we so everlastingly say, "you must do this; I had to do it." No hint that we, too, found it hard, perhaps, or that we failed even more than our children are failing.

I'm thinking particularly of a 10-year-old lad who said to his mother: "I can't understand fractions, and I can't understand why I have to learn to multiply fractions. I'll never have to multiply fractions when I grow up, will I?"

The average mother would have replied that all children have to learn to multiply fractions and that it wasn't for the child to ask why. But this lad's mother wasn't afraid to come down off her pedestal and admit that she was human, with human failings and dislikes and problems.

"No, you probably won't have to multiply fractions very often when you are a man," she replied. "I thought fractions were very hard, too, when I studied them. But I had to learn how. Not that I've used that specific knowledge much since I've grown up, but, in learning any branch of mathematics, we train our minds. It's like you develop your arm muscles by throwing a baseball. You may not be a baseball player when you grow up, but the muscles you've developed by playing ball now will be used for something else, something you DO want to do."

The child nodded. He thought this over for a long while and then with a sigh he tackled his fractions again.

He had accepted the logic of his mother's explanation and she hadn't lost any of his respect by admitting that she, too, had been through the throes of multiplying strange looking figures.

Another woman who holds the love and respect of the children with whom she comes into contact is a teacher. And she uses the same method—that of comradeship, never the "holier than thou" attitude. When time came for examinations she said to a class one afternoon: "If I were you I'd brush up on the work we've done this month. I'm required to give you a test on it. Now I know approximately what each of you knows about the subject, but tests are a part of the routine. I dislike them as much as you do, but it's just one of those things that has to be done. Give me the best you can on it and let's get it over with. Then we'll have more time for the work we enjoy doing."

And did that teacher lose caste by admitting that she, too, hated tests? Not a bit. There was a feeling of comradeship in that room—wasn't "teacher" having to go through the blamed thing, too? Let's go. So they pulled together. And they pulled FOR that teacher.

Household Hints

Always keep the flour-bin in a warm, dry place. Damp flour will never make light cakes and pastry.

Keep knitting needles and crochet hooks in a box with plenty of powdered starch, and they will not rust.

Dried orange skins are excellent for helping to light your fire in the morning, as also are lemon skins. The oils in these skins encourage a quick flame.

By keeping the shades raised and windows open to the afternoon sun, it is possible to induce enough warmth into the rooms to ward off the first chill that comes with sunset.

Furniture that has lost its polish through neglect may be restored by rubbing with linseed oil or paraffin, or by washing with equal parts of vinegar and warm water. Wipe with a damp cloth and dry, and polish off with a good furniture polish or cream. Give a final rubbing with a piece of chamois leather.

NEW TAX WILL BE PASSED TO FANS

THERE'S NO DOUBT as to who'll have to stand the burden of the proposed new federal tax of 10 per cent on all sports tickets costing more than 46 cents in the opinion of John A. Heydler, president of the National League, who was a Pittsburgh visitor yesterday. As was generally presumed in the first place, the additional expense will be passed along to the customer. At least that will be the case as far as baseball is concerned, and it is expected that the same policy will be followed in other branches of athletics.

John A. Heydler

President Heydler explains that this is unavoidable, saying the proposed law provides that the tax must be paid by the ticket buyer. Asked if the price of tickets might be reduced so that the new rate, with tax included, would be about the same as at present, or reduced sufficiently at least to divide the extra expense between the clubowners and the fans, the league chief said he regretted that no arrangement of that kind could be made, and that the old scale of prices would continue, with 10 per cent tacked on, to be paid by the patrons.

PRESIDENT HEYDLER says the measure cannot go into effect until after the season has opened and therefore will not apply to the early games. When it becomes a law it will mean that 50-cent bleacher seats at Forbes Field will cost 55 cents, 75-cent bleacher seats will cost 83 cents, $1 grandstand admission will be $1.10, $1.25 reserved seats will cost $1.38 and box seats will jump from $1.75 to $1.93.

The league head does not look for the extra levy to have any marked effect in decreasing further the attendance at major league games, which fell off 15 per cent last year as compared with 1930. He says he believes the American people will be glad to turn to baseball as a means of throwing off the worries of recent months.

COLLEGE ATHLETIC CHIEFS are not so hopeful that the new tax will not send receipts downward. Even though the old prices are continued and the extra assessment is passed along to be assumed by the ticket buyers, they fear that the size of the crowds will be reduced.

It is figured that the effect of this will be a hard blow to the smaller colleges and the high schools, as many of them are already hard pressed to meet ordinary financial obligations in athletics. Some of them, just getting by as it is, may have to drop several sports, it is said, if receipts go lower.

THE REFUSAL OF Heinie Meine to come down in his salary demands when he conferred with W. E. Benswanger, Pirate president, in St. Louis yesterday, means that the Bucs will have to go to the post for the pennant start one week from next Tuesday with a limping pitching corps. It will be weeks before Charley Wood is able to pitch, following an operation for appendicitis, a sore arm may keep Remy Kremer from being ready for the opening series, and there is no chance now of Meine's being back in the fold in time to get in shape for the early games.

Steve Swetonic

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES, the news that Steve Swetonic had gone the route in such great form as to shut out the Cubs yesterday in the second game of the series on the coast was even more pleasing to the fans than it would have been ordinarily.

It was refreshing to see the Bucs take a turn for the better and hang up what was only their second victory in seven meetings with major league clubs, and it was gratifying to note Swetonic's return to form, but the most important angle is that it gives the Rovers another pitcher capable of doing first-string work just when he is most urgently needed.

MEINE AND THE club are too far apart to give promise of an agreement soon. It is understood that the figures in Heinie's contract have been boosted three times, but that the pitcher demands an increase of 56 per cent over his salary of last year.

The situation threatens to make things tough for the Bucs at the start of the season, with the world champion Cardinals to be faced in eight of the first 11 games, but Swetonic's comeback helps matters not a little.

BILL KEENAN, of Philadelphia, well remembered by fans of this district as an ideal basketball player and greatest of centers, surprised his home folk the other night by appearing in an old-timers' game, in which Bill's five defeated a picked team of former Philadelphia stars, 30 to 21. Besides Keenan, the old-timers' lineup included Thomas, McCarter, Wilson and McWilliams. The last named two, like Keenan, saw service in the old Central League here. Bill, near 50, electrified the crowd with his remarkable shooting, flashing the same old overhead shots that made him famous more than 25 years ago. Six times he sent long chances from the corners, center and side-centers through the hoop, and he passed and dribbled as of old.

KEENAN, STARTING WITH the famous Camden Nationals in 1899, was the first eastern pro player to be brought into this district. East Liverpool, O., engaged him for the season of 1903-04, one year before the Central League was formed. After eight unsuccessful attempts form 1901 to 1904, East Liverpool, with Keenan in the lineup, finally succeeded in defeating the South Side team.

Keenan was a most skillful and graceful player, smart as they came, and aggressive enough to be an asset to any team. He could time his jump probably better than any other center of the past or present, and though he was by no means the tallest tap-off man in the game he usually outjumped his opponent.

HOLDING SAMMY FULLER to a draw in their New York bout last night, with the betting odds heavily against him, demonstrated that Jack (Kid) Berg is not nearly so close to being washed up as some of the dopesters had figured him.

Frank Benkovic

It was another break for the promoters, as it leaves things as unsettled as ever in that part of the field seeking the lightweight title, and the showmen still have the same two cards to play over again whereas a different result would have eliminated one of them. A general adoption of the "no draws" rule would be popular.

AMONG THE STANDOUTS during the annual tournament of the American Bowling Congress at Detroit has been Frank Benkovic, 27-year-old Milwaukee pinster, who paired with Charley Daw in winning the leadership in doubles. Earlier in the season, Benkovic set a record in Chicago for all-events bowling when he rolled 774, 729 and 756 for a total of 2,259. In dethroning Eddie Rafferty and Charley Reilly, of Philadelphia, who won the doubles championship last year, Benkovic and Daw helped the 1932 tournament to keep up an A. B. C. record. That is, that since the birth of the organization in 1901 no champion has been able to repeat the following year. This time it looks like another 100 per cent sweep against the old champions. In addition to Rafferty and Reilly in the doubles, Walter Lachowski, of Erie, singles champion of 1931, and Mike Mauser, of Youngstown, O., who won the all-events championship last year, have also been unseated.

LOCAL BOXERS SHOW CLASS IN WINS

By JESS CARVER

The amateurs slaughtered some of the most valued precepts of boxing and one another through 33 bouts last night as the annual A. M. A. senior championship ring tournament wound up its third night of punching. The tourney will be completed tonight with the staging of the semi-final and final bouts in the Keystone A. C. gymnasium, where it has been going on since Wednesday.

Favorites generally slashed out triumphs, and won their rights into the crown-winning rounds.

So interesting, in fact, rousing, were last night's battles that a packed house stuck around almost to the man (and woman) until the final bout was complete. Perhaps it was the sensational battle staged by Al Sunseri, a Dempsey-like scrapper, and Paul Sloboda, in the 135-pound class, that early stirred the blood of the ladies and gentlemen to the old fever pitch. Sunseri, fighting for the Pittsburgh Lyceum, with Danny Ryan in his corner, and Sloboda, of the Pleasant Valley A. C., so whetted the appetites of the audience that it was several excellent bouts later that said appetite was appeased.

SUNSERI VICTOR

Sunseri won the verdict of the judges, and rightly so, but only after a tough fight. The compactly-built Al scraps a la Dempsey; hits with a devastating left hook and can take it on the lug without flinching. He bobs and weaves until he gets inside, and then lets fly with both mitts. Sloboda gave him plenty of trouble, but lacked the stamina to stick in there throughout.

Eight knockouts featured last night's scrapping. In outstanding exhibitions, young Eddie Katkish, of the Willow Club, fanned Isaac George, of the Burke A. C., of St. Michaels, Pa., with more left hands than the tattooed Ike thought existed; Dave Yarras, of Erie, punched out a win in three hectic rounds over Johnny Savillia, of the Linwood Club; Johnny Giachetti, of the Sands A. C., of Uniontown, whipped Tony Demore, of the Willow Club and Champion Charley Cravatta beat Jackie Randa, of the Willow Club.

Katkish and Giachetti gave particularly sparkling exhibitions. George was unable to land more than three or four solid smacks to young Katkish in the three rounds the boys traveled, so bewildering was the barrage of lefts laid down by the Strip scrapper and so accurate and devastating his short, chopping right.

GIACHETTI WINS

Giachetti, after suffering a nasty cut above his right eye in the first round of his scrap with Demore, rallied bravely to wind up on the long end of the verdict. The decision at first was announced in favor of Demore, but later, it was discovered that one of the judges had made a mistake in filling out his slip and Giachetti rightly was announced the victor.

Al Quail, of the Y. M. H. A., a good two-fisted puncher, scored a double triumph. First he won by a technical knockout over S. C. (Germany) Scholtz, of the Pittsburgh Lyceum, and then he went three rounds to whip the unorthodox and thoroughly hilarious Tiger Robinson, of the Harvey A. C., of Beaver Falls. By his triumphs Quaill entered the semi-finals the favorite in the class.

The heavyweights had their innings last night also, but only one, Nick Lazor, of the Burke A. C., exhibited anything but ordinary ability. Lazor stopped Georgie Gomboa, a B. & O. R. R. A. A. entrant, in the third round, after putting him on the canvas for a count of eight in the first round and counts of eight and seven in the second.

The gym was packed to the guards. The summary:

135-POUND CLASS

George Julius, Willow Club, defeated Kenneth Fields, Pittsburgh Lyceum, three rounds.

Al Sunseri, Pittsburgh Lyceum, defeated Paul Nicholls, Pleasant Valley A. C., three rounds.

Eddie Zivic, Pittsburgh Lyceum, knocked

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: VISITING AN INHUMAN REVENGE UPON HIMSELF—The "Believe It Or Not" series has cited numerous examples of inhuman self-imposed tortures on the part of the Hindu faquires for religious reasons. The case of Agostya, who held his arm aloft for 20 years until his nails grew through his palm, introduces an element of novelty. Agostya's reason for punishing himself in such a ghastly manner was that "an act of dire consequence had come to the world on account of this hand. It struck someone he loved most, and for that reason he punished it "that the sin shall cease to exist." The gaunt, shabby Agostya, whose petrified arms stuck out like a stump from his shoulder, was not a saintly man. The penance was rather a result of too literal an application of the rule of the offending limb, on the part of a superstitious savage. ALUMINUM IS HEAVIER THAN SAND—The specific gravity of aluminum is 2.56, equal to about 160 pounds per cubic feet. A cubic foot of sand will weigh from 84 to 110 pounds.

A. A. U. SWIM MARK FALLS

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 2.—(AP.)—Another world record, the fourth in two days of competition in the national senior A. A. U. championships, was shattered yesterday by the New York Athletic Club 400-yard relay team.

The New York quartet, defending the title, sped to a new time of 3 minutes 32 1-5 seconds in the Yale pool to clip one-fifth of a second from their recently established world mark. Johnny Howland, George Fissler, George Kojac and Walter Spence, comprising the New York team, set the new time in a preliminary heat through the splendid finishing efforts of Spence, anchor man.

The Illinois A. C. team, which placed second, held the New York combination on even terms during the first 300 yards, but Spence easily outswam Les Diamond in the final 100 yards.

The Illinois team qualified for the finals by beating Yale by inches, although both teams were timed in 3 minutes 35 2-5 seconds.

Johnny Schmieler, of the University of Michigan, was the day's outstanding individual performer. He won his heats in both events to qualify for the finals in the 220-yard free style and the 220-yard breast stroke.

Leonard Spence, of the New York A. C., defending champion, won his heat in the 220-yard breast stroke. The titleholder in the 220-yard free style, Albert Schwartz, of Illinois A. C., did not defend his crown.

A Tom Mooney street run will be held on the South Side, April 16. It is open to all runners.

MEINE, PREXY CONFAB FAILS

Heinie Meine, Pirate holdout pitcher, is practically lost to the club for the early weeks of the impending season, it developed today.

Pirate President William E. Benswanger, en route to Texas yesterday, conferred with Meine in St. Louis, but the meeting of the club official and player failed of its purpose. The pitcher, whose home is in Luxemburg, near St. Louis, greeted the Buccos' president who had a short stopover at the Missouri metropolis.

Meine, according to a telegram received from Benswanger by Vice President Samuel E. Watters, was adamant in his stand for an unusual advance. The home directors state the righthand star wants an increase of more than 50 per cent in his stipend. He had been offered three advances over his 1931 check, they said.

With the season due to open one week from Tuesday it was apparent that Meine would be unable to pitch until the race is well under way.

Mackmen, Phillies Open Series Today

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—(AP.)—The annual five-game series between Mr. Mack's Athletics and Mr. Shotton's Phillies for the unofficial championship of the city opens today.

LOS ANGELES, April 2.—The Pirates came out of their slump yesterday with a vengeance, pounding Dutch Henry, Cub southpaw, for 12 hits to score a shutout victory.

Manager Gibson's plan to place more power on the attack certainly came through in fine style. Gibson used his new batting order for the first time yesterday morning in the daily drills and it brought results immediately.

The third game of the Bruin-Pirate series will be played this afternoon at Wrigley Field. Glenn Spencer will do the hurling for the Pirates.

The Corsairs lost little time in solving the offerings of Henry yesterday. They began to pound his offerings in the first inning and continued throughout the eight frames to make the even dozen blows.

BUCS LACE SOUTHPAW

Portsiders were supposed to wave a spell over the Bucco batters last season, but Henry failed to uphold the reputation of the clan yesterday. The Corsairs have been hitting hard against left-handers since the exhibition tour began and it looks like what might have been true last season is not going to be this year.

Gibson's proteges looked and acted like a real team as they mowed down the Cubs. They sparkled in every department of play. The pitching, handled by Steve Swetonic, was superb. Steve was nicked for eight hits, but he managed to keep them well scattered. Only once was he in trouble, in the third, when the Cubs loaded the sacks with one down. Steve grabbed a hot grounder off Cuyler's bat to turn a bingle into a double play and avert a score.

Three double plays in the first five innings and another in the eighth showed clearly just how fast the Pirate infield was stepping along. The Cubs contributed two twin-killings to the battle.

THEVENOW, L. WANER STAR

Tommy Thevenow and Lloyd Waner were the leading hitters, each grabbing off three singles to lead the attack. Comorosky came through with a double and a single, while Steve Swetonic and Suhr had the other extra base hits, the former getting a double and the latter a triple.

Charley Wood and Remy Kremer, members of the ailing list, both showed marked improvement in their condition yesterday. Wood is getting along splendidly after his appendicitis operation, while Kremer reported that his arm felt much better.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

BILOXI, Miss., April 2.—Yesterday was April Fools' Day and I balanced my budget by borrowing five more bucks from Griff. I gave him my private dice for security and he should worry. They are worth double that, as I paid a stevedore $10 to load 'em.

Nick Altrock

We are slowly wending our way back toward Washington and it can't be too slow for me. The way Congress is acting there these days it is liable to make an admission tax for entering the batter's box and put a heavy inheritance tax on runners that die on bases.

We start a new exhibition series today, but I won't be able to tell about it unless I learn to spell Chattanooga.

Edgewood's Family of Sports Celebrities

N. M. GARBARK — THOMAS — MARY — GEORGE

Baseball, football, basketball and track athletes are included in the family of 10 boys and girls reared by the N. M. Garbarks, of Edgewood. Art, the oldest of the five boys, who is trying out with the Wichita Falls Club, of the Texas League, is not included in the above family photo, which is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture taken in the Garbark home.

SOHO TO SEEK CITY BERTH

By TOM BIRKS

Another contender for a berth in the City League came forward yesterday. The Soho Board of Trade nine, playing its home games at the new Crawford Recreation Park on Webster avenue will attend next Thursday's session to try and influence the officials to grant it a berth.

The champion Soho hooter, Johnny Hornyak, is to be the business manager of the club. According to reports to the Board of Trade, he expects to have a winner.

While the list of players covered with wax not available, it is said that Josh and Bill Bilies infield and outfield stars in Manager Tommy Carson's days will be on the club. In fact quite a number of the old Liberty stars will be lined up. Karle, another classy infielder also has been mentioned among the prospects.

There is a chance that the new Crawford Park will prove valuable City League territory, and Soho will provide keen competition for the other clubs. Soho, with teams in the old Central West Penn and City leagues, always has been a power. Playing its games at Moultrie Park, with the short right field, has spoiled all its home games.

The West Penn League closed its roster last evening at Honus Wagner's Homestead Aces. Carrick Eagles, St. Joachim's, St. Clair Frogs, Community Builders, Duquesne Republicans, Martin Club and the Marty Griffins compose the loop. All business with the exception of drawing up the schedule, was completed. Honus Wagner was elected president.

Berg Earns Draw With Sammy Fuller

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP)—Jack Kid Berg, the White Chapel Whirlwind, came far enough back along the road to his old place near the top of the lightweights last night to hold Sammy Fuller, a little buildog of a fighter from Boston, to a draw in a bristling 10-round duel before a crowd of 12,000.

Twice Berg battling desperately to come back after a long rest and two bad beatings by the class champion, Tom Cringoli, was on the floor. Once in the fifth he went down for a count of five and again in the ninth for a count of nine just as the closing bell rang. But neither of those knockdowns, the first the result of a low right swing, nor the steady stream of thundering mallops Fuller poured into the Red Top's body could stop Berg from receiving the draw verdict.

Garbarks, of Edgewood, Fine Athletic Family

By JULIUS LEVIN

Swissvale may sing the praises of the Emricks, the East End boasts a fine family of athletes in the Leveys, Ambridge has its Matzies, but to Edgewood go the laurels for the most illustrious sports family in Western Pennsylvania—the Garbarks.

Six of the 10 boys and girls reared by the N. M. Garbarks, of 150 Lloyd avenue, Edgewood, already have earned their spurs in the sports world, and further athletic fame was to be added to the family today, when Agnes oldest of the girls, becomes the bride of William "Happy" Davis, star outfielder of the Dormont Club of the City League. Agnes has starred in her own right in amateur running and baseball.

DAD PLAYED BASEBALL

Michael Garbark, father of the Edgewood flock, admits he never amounted to much as an athlete but his children have more than made up for his failure by starring in football, basketball, baseball and track.

The senior Garbark played a little sandlot baseball around Chicago, but his work at second base was nothing to write home about.

Art, eldest of the Garbark boys, now is a member of the Wichita Falls Club, of the Texas League, seeking a regular berth as a shortstop. The Wichita Falls franchise is operated as a farm for the St. Louis Browns of the American League, and, if Art makes the grade, he will advance to the majors.

Art also had a taste of football, having played along with Toby Uansa on the 1927 University of Pittsburgh freshman eleven. Art, now 24, was a regular for four years on the Edgewood High School quintet, playing at guard. He held the famous Charley Hyatt to two field goals in the W. P. I. A. L. elimination series while the latter was starring for Uniontown High School.

STAR AT ALLEGHENY

Bob, 22, is the second of the Garbark boys to earn fame in athletics. He is winding up a brilliant career at Allegheny College this spring. He was the regular fullback of the Methodist eleven for four years and was proclaimed the best in Class B college ranks hereabouts. He captained the Alligators in 1930 and 1931. He also earned his letters at Edgewood High School in basketball, football and baseball. He was a catcher in baseball. Both Art and Bob took part in the W. P. I. A. L. eliminations as members of the championship Edgewood quintet.

Helen, 20, was captain and star guard of the Edgewood High School girls' basketball team. After enjoying four years of athletic success under the coaching of Wally Pickett, Edgewood High mentor, Helen enrolled at Slippery Rock State Teachers' College, but was ineligible for sports due to the fact she took only a two-year course. However, this did not prevent her from starring in intramural athletics.

Edgewood High will turn out another Garbark at this year's commencement when Clara, 18, captain of this season's basketball sextet, receives her diploma. She starred as guard and center on the Pickett team.

STAY BACK IN SCHOOL

The graduation of Clara, however, does not deprive the high school of its last Garbark. Michael, Jr., 16, sophomore fullback of last year's football team, stellar guard in basketball and third baseman of the baseball team, will be back for two more terms. He was a member of the Swissvale American Legion championship baseball team last season, playing third base. The Emricks, of Swissvale, also played on this team.

Thelma, 14, enrolls at Edgewood next fall and will be a candidate for the girls' basketball team.

And before Michael, Jr., and Thelma complete their school studies three more Garbarks will be available for athletics at Edgewood High School. Mary, 12; Tom, 9, and George, 7, soon will be ready to take up where their famous brothers and sisters leave off.

Local Ring Second Draws Suspension

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—(AP)—The State Athletic Commission yesterday announced the suspension indefinitely of Joseph V. O'Neill, also known as Charley O'Neill, a boxer, of Atlas, Pa., for "conduct detrimental to the sport."

Two seconds and a manager also were suspended. They are Joseph Netro, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Joseph Rigby, of Pittsburgh, seconds, and Henry Andrews, of Syracuse.

WINDSOR MAY GAIN POSITION OF FAVORITE

By CARL W. SHATTO

Only in the event of a Windsor victory over Buffalo will a title favorite emerge from the International Hockey League championship series games to be played tonight.

The Bulldogs, defending champions, are to meet the Bisons at Fort Erie, Ont. Because they are the only aggregation able to escape the deadlock epidemic long enough to crash through to a victory, the Windsorites can assume a commanding position by chalking up another triumph.

Buffalo has participated in two ties, and neither a victory nor a defeat will be of any particular significance.

LONDON, BISONS TIED

London, showing two ties after two playoff starts, is in an exactly similar position. After starting well by holding Buffalo to a tie on the Bisons' home ice, the Tecumsehs slumped and permitted Detroit to make off with a tie at London.

London is to play at Detroit tonight, and another defeat for the Olympics will blast their championship hopes. Detroit lost the opening series game to Windsor in an extra-period duel at Detroit.

In the National League's playoffs for the Stanley Cup, emblematic of the world championship, only one game is carded. The Montreal Maroons and Toronto Leafs, deadlocked after playing to a tie at Montreal on Thursday, will settle their debate at Toronto tonight.

MAROONS, LEAFS CLASH

Their affair is a home-and-home series decided on total goals, and the Leafs should win and qualify to meet the New York Rangers in the cup series final. The first game in the final series is to be played at New York on Tuesday.

GUY SALERNO, WEST LOSE

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor

A near-capacity crowd turned out at the Kapphan Arena last night to take in the first show with Apples Meyers as the matchmaker, and saw two of the leading local middleweights beaten by stablemates from New York.

Angel Cliville

The victors were Joey LaGrey, formerly of Johnstown, and McKeesport returning after an absence of several years, and Angel Cliville, Porto Rican Negro, who boxes under the same management as LaGrey, and the victims, Guy Salerno, localized Californian, handled by Jack Perry, and Tiger Joe West.

Salerno lost the decision to LaGrey in the 10-round main event, while Cliville, a hard hitter, scored a technical knockout victory over West as the fifth round ended in the other scheduled 10-rounder.

JOEY HANDY WINNER

LaGrey won handily, although he did not appear to be in the best of condition, being fat and slow of foot at 161¾ pounds, against his rangy opponent's 158½. However, he was altogether too ringwise for Salerno and slapped and cuffed his way to an edge in all but the first two and the fourth rounds. He hit low a number of times and also battered the kidneys, but he also did a lot of clean scoring in fair territory, and, although handicapped in size and reach, had no difficulty landing when he wanted to and keeping Salerno from getting set. Salerno was bothered by a cut eye from the second round on.

West did very well against Cliville until the finish came. He outscored him slightly while boxing carefully in the first two rounds, and was hurt and had to hold on in the third. He won the fourth, but couldn't stand the gaff when Cliville stepped out with some steam behind his punches in the fifth.

REFEREE SAVES WEST

Angel, who has stowed away Rene DeVos, Frankie Battaglia and Tait Littman, among others, readied up the Tiger with a two-fisted attack and then rubbed his gloves together before his face and loaded up a right that dropped West as if for the count. Joe pulled himself up at nine, but was groggy, and Cliville dashed across the ring and drove him into the ropes with a left to the head, whereupon Referee Eddie Kennedy intervened to save West just as the bell rang. It was a good move for West was in bad shape and might have been seriously injured. Cliville weighed 160½ pounds and West 164½.

Steve Senich, of Homestead, and Leon Jendrasiak, Grand Rapids southpaw featherweight, fought to a wildly acclaimed draw in the second bout, with Senich coming strong after being floored for nine with a left to the jaw in the second round.

Patsy Hennigan, of Clairton, won by a technical knockout when the referee stopped his bout with Johnny Banko, New Castle lightweight, at the end of the fourth round, after the bell had saved Banko at the count of four and his seconds had carried him to his corner. Banko also was down for six in the second round and fought a gritty battle.

Another double windup card is being arranged for the Arena next Friday night.

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES TO DECLINE

Early Trading Quiet With Most of Losses Limited To Fractions; Auburn Off

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP.)—The stock market continued its straggling decline in the early trading today.

Save for a few fair sized blocks, the early trading was quiet, and most losses were limited to fractions. Losses of 1 to 1½ points appeared during the first half hour, however, in American Telephone, American Can, Allied Chemical, New York Central, Missouri Pacific preferred, Union Pacific and Case. National Lead and Auburn lost more than 2.

The week drew to a close with much of the uncertainty over federal taxation removed by final adoption of the tax measure in the House, but the fact that the Senate will require several weeks left the matter still an important market factor.

So far as securities markets are concerned, brokers said the only group to benefit, presumably, would be the tax exempt bonds, which have managed to forge ahead this week, while markets generally were slumping to new lows for the bear cycle. Financial quarters, however, took some comfort in the defeat of the maximum surtax of 65 per cent proposed on largest incomes.

Railroad securities appeared to have been orphaned once more by uncertainty arising from the disinclination of the Interstate Commerce Commission to authorize reconstruction loans to meet maturing bank loans, and the fiery comment evoked from some quarters in Congress. This was despite the fact that all April 1 maturities were met and February earnings reports showed substantial improvement.

Sterling cables weakened somewhat, opening at $3.76, off 2 cents. The French franc opened steadily.

CANCELLATION HELD FATAL TO TRADE

Payment in Commodities And European Exchange Urged by Financier

The [illegible] plan of Bernard [illegible] collecting [illegible] United States

1—Payment would be received in dollars [illegible] non-perishable commodities which are now produced by American farmers.

2—As a contribution to restoration of the Australia prosperity the United States [illegible] suggested [illegible] commodities such as tin, rubber, manganese, chrome, rubber, possibly even silver, for five years.

3—Resumption of debt service would end the automatic moratorium situation whereby we postpone payments due us yet continue to honor European drafts on us for offsetting payments due abroad.

4—Resumption of payment after June 30 would defeat any efforts to throw us off our gold perch.

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
General Service

NEW YORK, April 2.—Bernard M. Baruch, financier and war-time economic adviser to the Wilson administration which granted the war loans to European countries, in an exclusive interview outlined a plan for debt collection at the end of the moratorium which he believes would help to promote business revival throughout the world.

Mr. Rukeyser

Contradicting the widespread propaganda to the effect that further postponement of debt payments or outright cancellation is necessary for world economic recuperation, Mr. Baruch, former chairman of the War Industries Board, told me that collection along businesslike lines "might well start a revival in commodity prices and stimulate world trade by freeing the markets of deadening surpluses."

Mr. Baruch's insistence on resumption of interest payments by the Allies after the present one-year moratorium expires on June 30, is in line with a similar viewpoint expressed to me earlier in the week by another leading financial mind in the administration which granted the loans to the associated nations, namely William Gibbs McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, who was responsible for making the loans under conditions authorized by Congress.

DEFAULT THREATS

As to threats of default provided Congress refuses to extend the moratorium, Mr. Baruch said to me:

"Some of the nations want to pay. If some choose to default, the consequences of such action will be harmful to their credit and prestige and will hurt them in international trade. They know this. The effect of defaults would be to drive to the United States international trade which defaulting countries will no longer be able to finance because people will no longer trust them.

"I am opposed to cancellation on our part.

"To cancel, in order indirectly to relieve Germany of further cost of the war, would be to take $500,000,000 a year from the backs of their industries and put it on ours."

PAY IN COMMODITIES

Getting down to the framework of his proposal for meeting the situation as it exists in this abnormal year of continuing international business depression, Mr. Baruch explained:

"Some of the debtor nations say that they can only pay in goods and services. Well, that is not an insuperable obstacle.

"The government might temporarily consider accepting part payment in non-perishable commodities which are non-competitive with those raised or produced in America—such as tin, jute, manganese, chrome, rubber, possibly even silver. Perhaps the government might agree to store these commodity payments and hold them off the market for, say, five years.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

"A friend of mine made what I think is an excellent suggestion, i. e., if the debtor countries experience difficulties in connection with the transfer problem of getting sufficient dollars, why shouldn't the United States consider accepting part payment in pounds, francs and marks? Such assets would be extremely valuable. The government could resell them through private channels to tourists going abroad, to residents sending remittances to the old country, to importers needing foreign funds. This would offset the foreign demand for gold dollars and would defeat any efforts to throw us off our gold perch.

"It would end the anomalous situation which has been prevailing this year, which has concealed our true creditor position. We granted a moratorium on payments due us, yet honored drafts on us for offsetting payments due abroad. So you see these foreign debts have a real value, one that we should not pass up too lightly.

"The $270,000,000 which the associated powers owe the United States for the next fiscal year is a small item compared with the whole of international payments and has been grossly exaggerated for propaganda purposes."

Aluminum Company of America Earned $2.66 A Share on Preferred

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE ALUMINUM COMPANY of America earned less than half its preferred dividend requirements last year. This was shown by the annual report for 1931 which indicated net profit of $3,910,053 after deducting interest, depreciation, depletion and special adjustments. This was equivalent to $2.66 a share on 1,472,625 shares of 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock of $100 par value and accounted for the reduction in the dividend rate on this issue from $6 to $3 a share annually.

In 1930 net profit was $11,672,727, equivalent to $1.93 a share on 1,472,625 shares of common stock after deducting preferred dividends. Profits for 1930 compare with record profits of $25,318,051 or $11.19 a common share in 1929.

The Aluminum Company during the past two years has suffered from the declining rate of activity in the industries which are the principal consumers of aluminum. In addition the competition of other metals with aluminum has been sharpened by the declining prices in other fields which have not been matched in this company's products. Prices for copper, tin, lead and zinc have slumped to the lowest levels in many years but only minor changes have taken place in the market for virgin aluminum ingots. The base price of this metal is now 22.90 cents per pound. This compares with a record low point of 19 cents a pound in 1913. This is only a few cents a pound under the high point for aluminum since that time.

Company Is Only Maker Of Metal in This Country

THE ALUMINUM COMPANY of America is the sole maker of virgin metal in the United States, but it supplies only about one-third of the total amount of aluminum consumed. There are two other sources. One consists of secondary or scrap metal which amounts to about half the supply and is principally used for castings. About one-sixth of the supply comes from foreign companies. At present the price of secondary aluminum stands at 8 cents a pound, the lowest in the history of the industry, but no similar decline has taken place in the market of the virgin material. Virgin metal usually must be employed in the manufacture of forgings and similar aluminum products.

Constant effort is being made by the Aluminum Company to develop new markets for its product. This is seen in the increased use of aluminum furniture in recent years and the more recent development of aluminum structural material. The principal uses of the heavier products at present are in the transportation field, where the savings in dead weight of trucks and railroad cars become an important factor in operating costs.

Bills Payable Gain During Past Year

INVENTORIES WERE increased from $38,282,486 at the end of 1930 to $42,199,052 at the end of 1931. This follows the usual policy of the organization of increasing holdings of ingots during slack times in order to take care of business during peak periods. It also reflected a desire to assist the general employment situation, as well as the fact that heavy charges for hydroelectric power under contract must be paid whether used or not.

At the end of the year Aluminum's current assets amounted to $83,722,042 against current liabilities of $27,733,137. Cash amounted to $5,941,560, and marketable securities were carried at $24,491,058. Bills payable amounted to $23,050,000.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP)—The reduction in bank clearings this week continues very heavy. The total for all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $4,035,546,000 was 52.4 per cent less than the same week of last year. At New York City clearings were $2,672,931,000, a decline of 56.7 per cent from last year's figures, while the total for the cities outside of New York, of $1,362,615,000 was 41.2 per cent smaller.

It has been many months since bank clearings for a full week at these leading trade centers in the United States have been at so low a point. There is another reduction this week from last week of $813,598,000, whereas a year ago there was an increase over the preceding week of $475,210,000. The week last year, however, included one day of the heavy quarterly payments due at that time. The loss again is relatively much heavier at New York City than at most of the outside centers.

Clearings at leading cities, as compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., showing decreases as compared with same period a year ago follow (totals in thousands):

R. F. C. MAKES 974 LOANS

WASHINGTON, April 2.—(INS)—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation authorized 974 separate loans in the aggregate sum of $238,739,939, from February 2 to March 31, according to its first quarterly report to Congress today.

A total of $192,346,300 had been advanced and $7,471,894 repaid, leaving $184,874,413 outstanding.

In addition the corporation had agreed to make loans to banks and trust companies of $6,202,500, and $615,000 to joint stock land banks on the performance of specific conditions, included among the loans authorized were those to the following corporations:

Banks and trust companies, $158,182,200; railroads, $60,787,700; insurance companies, $7,080,000; mortgage loan companies, $6,517,000; building and loan associations, $4,878,750.

EXPLAINS PRICE OF ALUMINUM

The statement made by the Ford Motor Company that aluminum is cheaper today than at any time since its development is correct, but it refers to castings made of secondary aluminum and not the virgin metal, an official of the Aluminum Company of America said today.

Secondary metal, which consists of the cropped-off ends, waste from fabricating operations and scrap, makes better castings than virgin metal and is invariably used for this purpose. On the other hand, virgin metal is used for forgings and such automobile parts as pistons.

No. 1 virgin aluminum is now quoted at 22.90 cents a pound and compares with an official low quotation of 19 cents a pound in 1913. No. 12 secondary aluminum is quoted at 8 cents a pound, so that it is possible to make completed cast aluminum parts, suitable for most of the uses of the automobile industry, for less than the cost of virgin ingots.

Stock Exchange Topics

Street Expects Further Dividend Reduction On Atchison

The lack of rallying power in Atchison served to keep alive discussion of its dividend outlook. Directors are slated to meet next Tuesday for action on the quarterly payment due at this time. Santa Fe cut its rate from $10 to a $6 annual basis at the January meeting, ordering a dividend of $1.50 a share. The road, however, operated at a deficit during January for the first time in 15 years, and net operating income in February, while better than January did not fully cover fixed charges. Loadings in March were slightly better than in February, but about 19 per cent under the same month last year. The street would not be surprised, therefore, if the board found reason for another adjustment in the rate.

The situation in the stock loan market after the close yesterday was described as materially easier than that which was revealed late Thursday. The high premiums ruling on stocks like steel, American Telephone, Westinghouse Electric and other active issues, presumably served to attract considerable in the way of additional stock for lending purposes. The closing out of short positions by some traders who were unwilling to pay the going premiums was indicated, however, by a scattering of "cash" sales which appeared just prior to delivery time.

The wish may be father to the thought, but Wall street was inclined to look toward the Senate for some measure of relief from the burden which will be placed upon financial transactions and speculation in the event that the House tax bill is carried. There are no distinct schools of thought on the subject, one group, less sanguine than the other, seeing little hope for expecting the Senate to attempt any important revision of those portions of the House schedule which affect the market. But another group, seemingly in the majority, holds to the opinion that some of the objectionable features will be modified, particularly the proposed heavy impost on stock transfers.

The opinion is general that soldier bonus legislation will be passed by both houses in Washington after the tax bill is out of the way. However, it is considered certain that such a measure will be vetoed by President Hoover and the measure cannot be carried again by the necessary vote to override such action by the chief executive. Nevertheless, when the bonus bill is up for consideration it is likely there will be some disturbance in the stock market.

More than 15 million dollars were added to the Pennsylvania Railroad's investment in road and equipment last year, according to the general balance sheet, showing the financial condition of the company as of December 31, 1931. The total investment in the company's road, equipment and other general capital expenditures now stands at $1,173,929,872. In addition, road and equipment improvements on leased railroad property amounted to $98,363,126, making a grand total of $1,272,292,999. The balance sheet also reveals that the company's investment in the securities on the properties of affiliated companies amounts to $606,647,446, and in non-affiliated companies, including government bonds, of $90,628,245. Reflecting the strong cash position of the company at the close of the year, cash and other quick assets in the balance sheet total nearly $63,000,000.

At the moment, investors are likely to be influenced more by political developments than any other influence. Politics probably will continue to obscure improvement in fundamentals. Many industrial leaders are of the opinion that spring business was checked in the past month by political uncertainty. Consumers who were interviewed were more inclined to discuss developments at Washington than prospects in their own lines. The psychology of the situation makes for continued caution.

HORNE COMPANY SHOWS PROFIT FOR 1931

Earnings Equivalent to $3.96 Share on Preferred; Financial Position Strong

Joseph Horne Company reports for the year ended January 31, 1932, after all expenses, depreciation and federal taxes, net profit of $267,475, equal to $3.96 a share on 67,469 shares of 6 per cent preferred stock, par value $100, compared with $1,658,413, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $2.57 a share on 240,000 shares of common in the previous year. Outstanding common stock at the end of the last fiscal period was 230,715 shares.

PRICES DECLINE

Sales volume declined from $19,969,865 to $15,955,381. A. H. Burchfield, president, says volume declined as a result of the general drop in commodity prices, supplemented by lessened purchasing power of consumers. Profits declined as a result of inventory and operating adjustments made necessary by the general abnormal conditions, he says.

Burchfield points out that the company's condition financially is stronger than ever before in its history.

CASH INCREASED

Cash increased from $2,401,718 to $2,942,308 on January 31, 1932, and total current assets on that date were $8,258,820 against current liabilities of $1,295,765. The company has no bank loans. Its position a year earlier was $9,403,910 current assets and $2,006,878 current liabilities. Inventories were reduced from $3,505,396 to $2,602,778. After payment of preferred dividends and other adjustments, earned surplus declined from $1,652,751 to $1,480,524.

Total assets amounted to $17,375,336.

Sun Life Changes Policy Dividends

NEW YORK, April 2 — The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada has reduced to 65 per cent of last year's scale the amount of the dividend to be paid on policies in the insurance year, which began yesterday.

The company states this is a temporary change to cover present business conditions and that it is confident that in a short time former rates will be resumed.

The bubchen was well. He was chubby and blooming. He reached for the crystal beads around Lily Lou's neck, and pulled on them sturdily.

But he didn't know her. Oh, he didn't know her!

Mrs. Jensen came and took him from Lily Lou's arms, and he reached his little hand, and put it on Mrs. Jensen's shoulder as she bore him away.

Lily Lou wept.

"Pshaw!" Mrs. Jensen said, "don't you care. They never know anybody really at that age."

Lily Lou was not comforted. She told Tony about it when he came in to see her that evening. "Sure, he's too young to remember. Let's eat and you'll feel better," he said.

He had with him a can of anti-pasta, two tins of anchovies and a long loaf of Italian bread and a half pound of Swiss cheese.

She made coffee and they feasted.

"Too bad Maxie is out. She'll miss the party."

"I can't be sorry," Tony said, with his mouth full of bread and cheese.

"I know you don't like her. But she's been such a good friend to me, Tony. Where do you suppose I'd be living now if it weren't for her." And oh, Tony, if I just had enough to hire someone to take care of the bubchen here Maxine would even agree to that." And there aren't many that would now, are there, Tony?"

TONY MARRIED

For answer he swore in his native Italian. Then he got up and began to pace the floor, waving his arms, muttering to himself.

"To think that I—that I would cut off my right arm for you—"

"Tony!"

"Don't stop me. I adore you. You know that. Always—from the first. And now this hellish poverty. Bills, debts, bills! Nothing to offer you. And Lily, my sweet, you do not know that I am married. A wife, Lily, sweetheart, in Brooklyn. And yes, four boys, 6, 11, 12 and almost 14, that must have the shoes. The money I could use for you, Lily, sweetheart, for you and the baby and me in a nest of love—just us—oh, Lily, Lily—"

Lily Lou's mouth twitched. She didn't know whether she was going to laugh or cry. Tony, poor blessed, darling Tony with his big family and his bald spot and his limp.

But he loved her. Not because she was pretty or because she had the beginnings of a career or for any of the other reasons that men had looked at her since she came to New York, but just for herself.

STILL LOVES KEN

She found her eyes filling. "Tony," she said gently, "it does not matter, do you see? Because you have your—your obligations. And because all that—all love—everything like that—is gone for me. Dear Tony, I loved the man I married, and I couldn't ever—couldn't ever—"

"You still love him!"

"Yes, I suppose so, Tony. Not that it matters."

"After all that is past you can still love him?"

"Don't you feel that you'll always have to love your wife, Tony? I mean—no matter what she did, or does to you, it doesn't matter, because she's part of you and you're part of her—"

She stumbled, stopped by the look in Tony's liquid brown eyes.

"Santa Maria, no!" he said.

Afterwards, Lily Lou thought of it as more or less her luck. She didn't love Tony. But even if she did she couldn't have had his protection and help, not even his financial aid, the wife and the four boys in Brooklyn. Must every man who looked at her be married? What was the matter with her that she should draw that sort of thing?

BORROWS MORE MONEY

First Ken, with his Peggy, and then the American boy in the chop suey place with his jealous girl, and Madame Nahlman's husband, with his quiet, secret advances, and Maxine's boy friends, and now—even poor darling Tony—

And—she put off thinking of that—Dwight Gwin.

But Gwin couldn't be put off much longer. She knew that.

She went through the want ads in the papers. But if she did get a job it wouldn't begin to pay for her lessons, with Gwin or anyone else worth while. And how would she eat and what would the bubchen do?

Better to have given up—stayed in California. But if she did that the baby—No, there was no going back. She'd have to go on, somehow.

She borrowed $50 from Wanda Pillsbury, hating herself for asking, hating herself for taking it, hating Wanda for her air of "I never expect to see it again, but I'm kindhearted and can't refuse—"

That melted in 10 days, what with her share of the month's expenses in the apartment, and the woolly rabbit with the floppy ears that she couldn't resist for the baby.

It was well along in September now. Gwin came in twice a week, and after the first of October she would work with him every day, and would be able to take the weekly check conscientiously. If she could just hold out until then. Mrs. Jensen's $50 was due on the twenty-first, and there would be extras besides, perhaps $12 or $15.

She had started work in the Metropolitan chorus, three nights a week for rehearsals now, and soon it would be every night. Dramatic lessons, too, and Gwin told her it was time she took fencing and dancing . . . watching her with that glitter in his eye.

"What's the trouble today?"

"Nothing. It's just that I'm overwhelmed when I realize how unprepared I am—even for the little parts I'm likely to get this season if I'm lucky—"

"What did I tell you when you came here a year ago—all ready to sing Butterfly, and a few other big roles?"

"I know. But I didn't realize then. How could I? When I look back now and think of the hopes I had and how easy it seemed to realize them when I had only a smattering of languages—"

"You mean when you knew no languages and couldn't sing English correctly—"

"Yes, and when I think of all the other girls I've known—lots of them not so young as I, nor so—so pretty—striving—and hoping. Oh, Gwin, aren't you sorry for them? For all the girls who want to be singers, and are going to fail? Aren't you sorry for me, too? I am. I could weep for all of us."

He had been sitting on the piano bench. He rose now and took her gently into his arms.

"Don't say Gwin—it's ridiculous. Say Dwight—"

"Dwight, then — it doesn't matter, does it?"

He held her off at arm's length, studying her. Her sweep of dark waving hair, her fabulous lily-like skin, her dark brows, her full scarlet lips. "Yes, it matters. It matters like hell. You're not altogether a fool. What's the answer going to be? Oh, you don't have to give it now—this minute. Think it over, that's all. I've got to know."

Synopsis

Lily Lou Lansing has ambitions to become an opera singer. She meets Kentfield Sargent, son of a wealthy shipper. Ken is also interested in Peggy Sage, prominent society girl. Ken admits his love for Lily Lou and they go away and are married. When Lily Lou first sees Ken's mother she is told that Ken was not old enough to get married. Anxious days follow. Then Lily Lou is told by Ken's father that the marriage has been annulled. He gives her $500 and a ticket to New York. In New York she has a hard time getting a job and her money runs low. From a home town paper she reads that Ken has become engaged to Peggy. She learns that she is to become a mother. She gets a job as accompanist with Dwight Gwin, voice teacher. Nita Nahlman, famous opera singer, hears Lily Lou sing and offers to take her to Europe to study. In Vienna Lily Lou becomes the mother of a baby boy. When Lily Lou recuperates they return to Paris, where, through an injury to one of the singers, Lily Lou gets her first chance to sing in opera. She sings well and wins much praise. Lily Lou and her baby are sent back to New York by Nahlman. Maxine asks that they live with her. Lily Lou's mother dies. After borrowing train fare, Lily Lou gets home in time to attend the funeral. Before returning to New York, Lily Lou learns that Ken did not marry Peggy.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Lillian Are Pressed Into Service

Harry Underwood regarded his wife critically, as she asked him what he wanted of my memory and her shorthand at the bedside of the Chinese messenger upon whom the surgeon had just operated, using our library as an emergency hospital.

"You can't guess?" he said.

"No, I can't," she said obstinately. From what you tell us of his condition, he won't have strength to murmur anything but a word or two and that, anyone of your great intellects could jot down in longhand."

"That's just where you're off the track," he said. "He's showing signs of the concussion lifting, but he'll probably be delirious at first. If you'll kindly remember that he's a Chinese, you will realize that anything he may murmur will hardly be intelligible to the average ear. Ah, I see you get me. As I have remarked before, old dear, your brain works so fast that it dazzles me."

That he was talking thus lightly as a result of the emotional strain under which he had been laboring, I was sure. But Lillian was paying no attention to his nonsense. Her eyes were sparkling with the joy of mental discovery and she spoke quickly, enthusiastically, ignoring her husband's compliment.

"Oh! I see," she said, "you think he'll talk in Chinese, and that between Madge's memory and the fact that the shorthand system is based on sound, we'll be able together to make something out of what otherwise would be a mess. All right. I'll be with you just as soon as I get paper and pencil. Will you want any?" she turned to me.

I hesitated. It seemed like boasting to refuse, but I knew the queer tricks of the uncanny memory which is mine.

"I'd rather trust my memory," I said. "If I try to put down the sounds as I hear them, I—I can't explain——"

UNDERWOOD EXPLAINS

"It's perfectly simple," Mr. Underwood said, as Lillian went around in the little room of the library for the paper and pencils. "That memory of yours is like a mechanical train. If you wind it up and send it along its accustomed track, it will go beautifully, but if you try to tow it along with a string, you'll have trouble.

"The Lord He knows, I hate to ask you to do this, Lady Fair," he went on. "Your brain has had about all the setting-up exercises it needs. You could do with a rest instead of a stunt like this."

"Don't talk to me about rest," I said tensely. "Don't tell anybody, but I've just been eating my heart out to think that I had no part in this big job you have on hand. I'm so glad of the chance to be of a little use."

"Don't worry about that part of it," Mr. Underwood said a little grimly. "You'll be of use, all right, if you can repeat even one or two of the words he probably will say in his delirium."

"How can you make use of repeated sounds like that?" I asked curiously.

"I have a most remarkable Chinese friend in New York," Harry Unhere, but you and Lil can go in to see him in four hours time. If you just sit down and say the sounds over as you have heard them he will take them down and translate them for us into English. You see how much depends on this, don't you?"

"I suppose you think perhaps you will get a line on the men who have done this?" I asked.

"That's what I'm praying for," he said. "It's a slender chance, I grant you, but it's our only one."

HEAR FAMILIAR NAME

We followed him into the library where the surgeon and Katherine were bending over the figure on the cot, not inert now, but uttering little moans of pain.

Dicky stood a little pace apart and as we entered he sprang forward, took me by the arm and escorted me to a chair by the bedside, so near the surgeon that I was afraid I was inconveniencing him, but he moved aside quickly and gave me a smile of encouragement which made his face look far different than it had when he was discussing the emergency operation with Mr. Underwood. Evidently in the thrill of the successful work he had done, he had lost his glumness.

"I imagine it will not be long before he will speak," he said, "but I do not think he will recover consciousness for some time if at all."

"You think there is little hope," Lilian asked.

"Little is the word," the surgeon said, a little grimly. "I won't say 'no hope.' He has a fighting chance now which he did not have before. I can do nothing more for him just now, neither can Mrs. Bickett. We will wait at the foot of the bed here while you see what you can gather from his murmuring. There is no doubt that his first delirious words will be in Chinese."

His prophecy came true, but strangely enough the two words which first came from the lips of the delirious man were understood by both Lillian and myself, for that first murmur was a low wailing call:

"Lee Chow! Lee Chow! Lee Chow!"

It might be a good idea, at that. It's already been tried on the world, to some extent—and proved a big help to psycho-analysts.

Mine Guards' Brutality

It Is to Be Hoped the Pittsburgh Coal Company Has Learned a Lesson. Comment on Local News.

A mine superintendent and eight guards of the Pittsburgh Coal Company were found guilty of voluntary manslaughter in Fayette County yesterday in connection with the killing of a bystander in a strike riot. If this case, following the conviction in the Borkowski affair, has not taught the company a lesson, its stupidity is incurable.

Judge M. A. Musmanno, who fought so valiantly for the abolition of the coal and iron police, is again engaged in a work of mercy for a coal miner. He seeks clemency for Frank Pauletta, of Coverdale, who has been sentenced to hang in West Virginia for a murder committed 18 years ago. Since Pauletta is said to have been a good citizen in the meanwhile, his life should be spared.

One of the disturbing features of the Pauletta case is that the law was violated by officers of the law who arrested him. Extradition requirements were ignored; the man was virtually abducted and hustled across the state line. Whatever the outcome of the appeal for mercy for Pauletta may be, the manner in which he was arrested should not be allowed to pass without official rebuke.

The charge is made in connection with the arrest of Frank Borich, secretary of the National Miners' Union, whom the federal authorities propose to deport because of his radical activities, that the police raided the National Miners' Union headquarters and seized documents without the authority of a search warrant. The American Civil Liberties Union might well investigate.

The Harris "adopt-a-family" plan for the relief of the unemployed will be put into effect next week. The campaign for funds will be launched officially on Thursday. On the success of this effort depends whether or not 28,000 families desperately in need of immediate help are to be allowed to starve. Everyone with even modest resources is expected to contribute something.

The appeal to support a needy family for three months at a cost of $100 is not to be taken too literally. Those who can afford it are expected to support more than one family. Some of our richest citizens can take care of as many as 1,000 families each without danger of impoverishing themselves, and it is necessary that they do so if the campaign is to be a success.

On the other hand persons who cannot afford even $100 spread over a three-month period should contribute to the extent of their ability. Four persons "chipping in" $25 apiece can "adopt" a family. The important thing is that something be given by every family that is not "on the rocks" itself. The subscriptions should be more numerous than in the Welfare Fund drive.

It is gratifying to learn of the special efforts that are being made for the relief of unemployed women and girls. The Evangeline Home of the Salvation Army has set aside 50 rooms for their use, and Mrs. John M. Phillips, first vice president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, has suggested that a mass meeting of women be held, possibly in Syria Mosque, to consider a plan of action.

The Pittsburgh Railways Company has asked its employes to accept a wage cut of 10 per cent and is thinking of abandoning the weekly "pass." Officials are quoted to the effect that the company's revenues probably will not exceed $13,000,000 this year, as against $22,000,000 in 1926. Busses rather than trolley cars are the vehicles ordinarily used in London as well as in a number of American cities. Pittsburgh may come to it.

The railroads and steamships, suffering from heavy loss of traffic, are seeking to promote travel by making their rates more attractive. The Pennsylvania announces that the extra fare now charged on some of the fast trains to New York and Chicago will be abolished, effective April 24, on every train but the Broadway Limited, and that it will operate on an 18-hour schedule. It is to be hoped the change will bring improvement in business.

Other price reductions that the public will appre- ciate those announced this week by the manufacturers of most popular automobiles. The exhibitions of the new models are attracting large crowds of people and no doubt will result in numerous sales. Pittsburgh will benefit more, possibly, than any other city except Detroit from a lively revival in the motor car industry.

Dr. Ralph C. Hutchison, who is being inaugurated as president of Washington and Jefferson College today at the age of 32, has had a distinguished career, and Pittsburgh will be interested in watching the progress of the institution under his leadership. He will have some difficult problems with which to cope, but there is every justification in his record for confident expectation that he will solve them.

Pittsburgh, according to Dr. Howard Kidd, of the University of Pittsburgh, can ship goods to the Pacific coast more cheaply than they can be shipped from many mid-western points. It is the Panama Canal that makes this possible. Our advantage as a shipping center would be still greater if the Lake Erie and Ohio River canal were to be built.

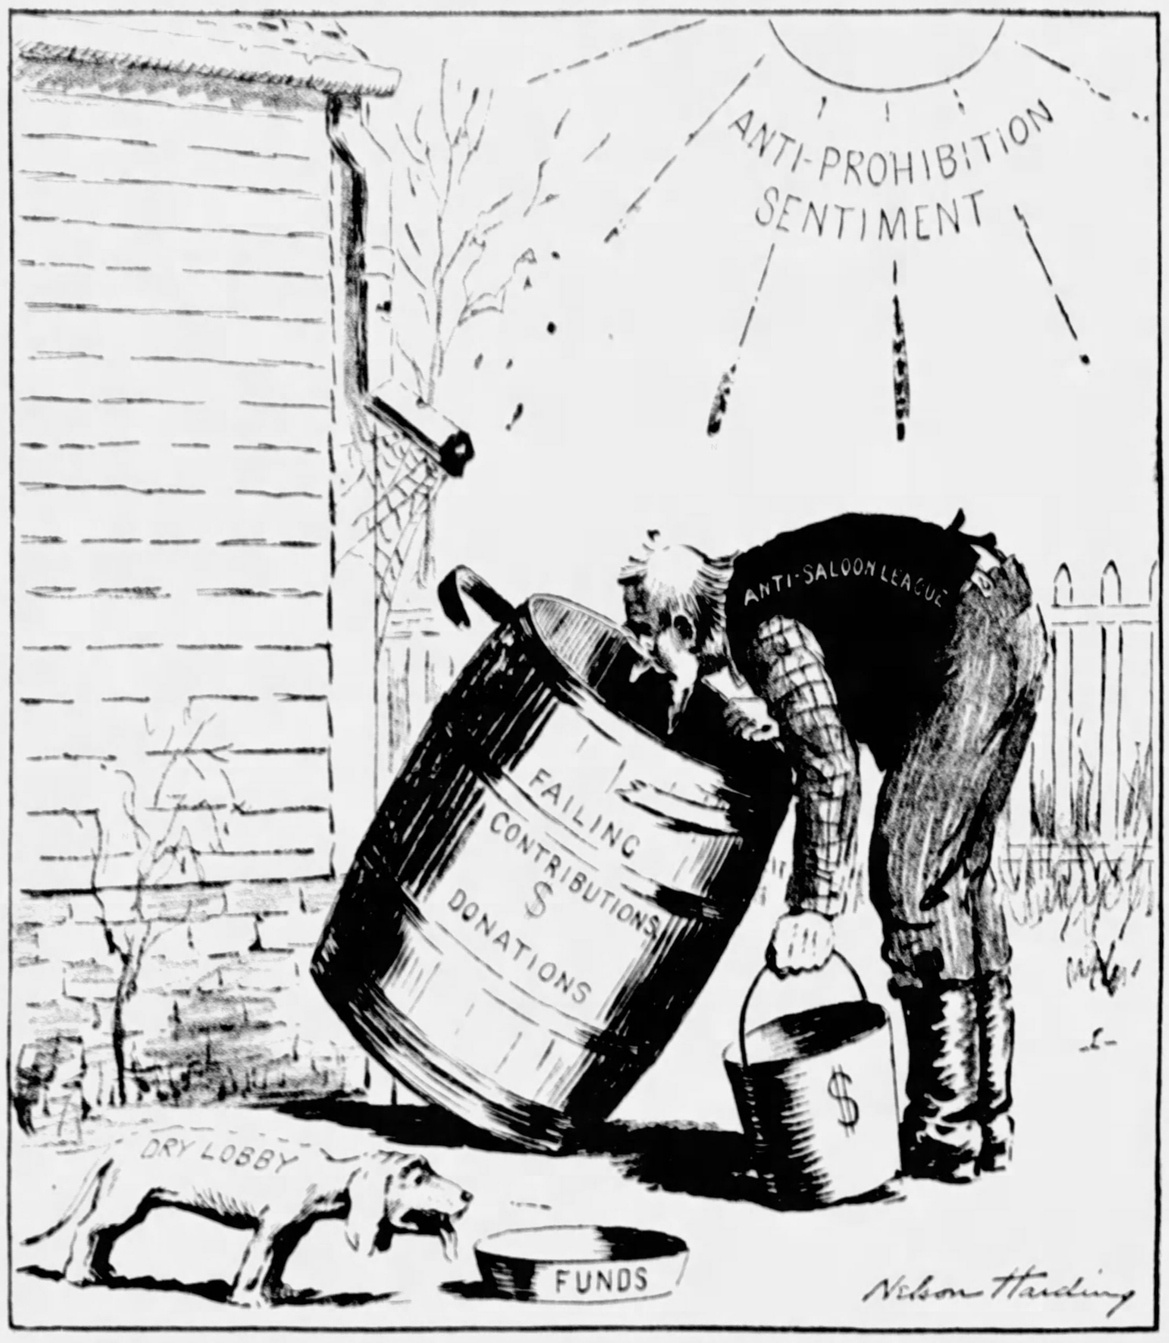
The Dormont school board has decided to make the summer vacation longer in order to cut down expenses. Care must be taken in cutting down school expenses that the children's education does not suffer in consequence. The taxpayers will stand a good deal before they will be willing to deprive boys and girls of any of the educational opportunities that the public schools now offer.

A treat is in store for readers of the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow. A new serial, "The Dude Ranch Mystery," by Mark Plum, begins in the American Weekly. Another notable feature will be the second installment of the story of the life of Father Coughlin, famous radio priest.

The Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will be filled with the spirit of spring. There will be an attractive picture of the cherry blossoms along the rim of the Tidal Basin in Washington, baseball pictures and photographs of Pittsburgh girl athletes in action. There will be a page of old-time photographs and another page of interesting babies.

Where It's Really Going Dry -:-

By Nelson Harding



No longer is there any doubt
About the boasted Volstead drought.
That dryness, forecast to befall
This land, did not descend at all.

But in one isolated place
Alarming dryness is the case.
Where barrels used to overflow
They're empty now, or very low.

Tips for the Love-Seeker

Fate is as careless as Central—always giving the wrong party or cutting you off from the right one.

* * *

Cultivate your intelligence, dear girl, and men won't notice how plain your face is; in fact, if your brains are too obvious, they won't notice your face, at ALL.

* * *

If hope chests were filled with patience, love, tact and understanding instead of with chiffons and baby-ribbon, most marriages would last a lot longer.

Some married people never know how happy they are together, until they have been divorced and discovered how miserable they are apart.

* * *

When a man's thoughts begin to wander away from a girl, nothing but a miracle can keep his feet from just naturally following suit.

* * *

There is nothing in the world that a man can tell a woman half so sweet as that which her mirror tells her, just after a fresh facial and a brand-new makeup.

* * *

There is, perhaps, no more "magnificent distance" than that between a modern man's theories on woman's right to "freedom" and his sub-conscious longing for an old-fashioned girl, who prefers to be a "rib."

Adam was not so far wrong when he discovered that woman is somehow responsible for whatever a man does. Woman can make almost anything she pleases of men; and just at present she seems to be doing her best to emulate Circe.

* * *

When a man pursues you, pretend to flee and he will follow; when he flees from you, DON'T follow, and he will turn around sooner or later and come back to see what is the matter.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 2.—I've crocheted myself a big pout over spring. Every paper or magazine I pick up features a poetic gurgle by some silly. You may have my share and a bright-eyed robin to boot. I was making out dandy with winter when spring sneaked up and tossed in the monkey wrench.

The carpets need beating, the Sealyham a clipping and they have me rooting around in the window boxes. There's something in careers—ridding up a window box. I have done enough for culture. I must take up horticulture. A pansy grower, that's what I am. Whoops!

A half-dozen people have come gushing up tittering about the lambkins gamboling in Central Park. But I don't gush back. I'm cagey that way. I just shave off a cool "Is that so?" Why should I run a fever because lambs act a fool? Yessir, I prick their bubble.

I suppose everybody would do a hand-stand if I ran out in the middle of Times Square, leaped into the air and began to baa-baa. Like fun. They'd be feeding me through a trap door. But a lamb gets away with it and it's cute. That's the human race and that's spring. Both are yours for the asking.

If spring hadn't come along, I might have had a chance to sport my raccoon coat. But now it must go back to the moth balls without a decent airing. The one thing I look important in is a raccoon coat. I don't ask much—just to wear it a few weeks.

As it is I didn't even get to stand out in front of the Palace. But a lot spring cares. I know the racket. All nestled in the lap of winter, spring suddenly opens it's eyes and yawns: "It's about time old horseface wants to show off that Paul McCullough again!"

And zip, spring is here. Then they expect me to tra-la, fashion a roundelay, skip up hills and down dales—smart lines by Lonsdale, incidental dialogue by Michael Arlen and music by Jerome Kern. Well, I'm going to sit right here and sulk.

* * *

Jolly King Winter! There's a card. No girlish giggling with that old buzzard. Just a he-guy with a frosty breath. But Spring! Never out in the open. Must tip toe up. One of the demure dames. Digging a toe in the dirt. "No spik Inglese!" I know that sort. One has my watch.

* * *

With Spring here I suppose I must drive out in the country and act like I love it. Mimosa, acacia, oleander. And the itty-bitty daisies with faces toward the sun. If I had a pan like a daisy I'd turn it to the sun, too. Daisies won't tell. A lot they know. Dumbest of flowers. No wonder they never open their traps and if I couldn't smell any sweeter than a daisy I'd begin flirting with a couple of squirts of perfume.

Yonder slope spangled with the crocus. Doesn't it make you cry? Not exactly cry but with a couple of beers I might choke up. I hope nobody sees me sniveling over a crocus. I must be brave. Don't droop crocuses! Act like everything is dandy. Shake your stems. That's enough. The idea! I didn't say shimmy. Look at the arbutus over there. They know how to sway without being vulgar.

* * *

O, too—also three meticulously mouthed goodies!—Spring brings the picnic lunch season. Get all full of red ants, canal water and everything. Isn't eating in a comfortable dining room and served by well trained servants the fadoodle? Lunch al fresco by the babbling brook and underneath a sweepingly clean sky. Who'll have a Horton? That's life. That and cholera morbus.

* * *

Still if spring hadn't come along it would be something else. Just when we get our heads above water some micaw swats us with an oar. I don't feel springish by six slightly used violets and a sprig of heliotrope. Let the nature lovers swarm to the countryside and frolic in those leap-for-buttercup dances. "Spring spinning its lovely shimmer across verdant hills." Bosh to that part, and a velocipede for little Egbert. Head the reindeers toward the Arctic circle and break me off a big fat icicle. There's a bit of blubber snagged between my back teeth.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

One of those days when noises get you—you know how it is.

For 10 hours I have been sitting writing in a New York hotel. Twelve stories up, but still the bellow and snarl, the roar and crash and whine of the big city found it way up and mauled me.

I was so sick of it all. Coarse, brutal noises. Cheap, silly noises. There, making day and night hideous, was the voice of our greed, our vulgarity and stupidity—the ugly yammer of human life.

Holding my hands against my aching head, I hated man.

I thought of all it had cost to bring man up out of the jungle; of the poets and prophets and heroes who had given their lives to make him something better than a beast; and with what result?

That noise rising from the street was the result. That savage yowl was the voice of the human spirit!

Why, a timber wolf, howling on the ridge against a mid-night sky, had a cleaner, braver voice than that!

Why should one believe in men, if that was all they had to say after thousands of years of "civilization?"

And then suddenly, across the shrill, harsh bedlam, there broke another sound.

Deep and clear, a great ship signaled from the harbor.

One long, steady note—the call of the sea!

And in that note there was all the wonder and glory of the sea—

The strength and depth of its dark waters—

The rise and fall of its mysterious tides—

The beauty of its quiet, moonlit nights—

The terror of its storms—

The stinging salt of its adventuring!

One note, out of the man-made bedlam; one note, clear and deep and true—that was also a part of man.

The call of the sea—the voice of the mystery that abides in every man—side by side with his stupid brutality.

For men are like that.

I thought of myself. I thought of all the cheap and cruel things I have done. I thought of the shrill bedlam with which I have filled my life; of my own arrogant shrieks and cowardly whimperings.

And yet, in spite of all that, sometimes there awakens in me the voice of the sea—

I hear a great, clear note that has nothing to do with the stupid clamor; and when that sounds, the other meaner voices do not matter.

For suddenly the old mystery moves in me again, and for a little while I am brave and kind and wise.

For a little while I remember the sea—the clean, deep sea from which, somehow, I came.

"Yes," I thought, "I am like that. We are all like that."

And I stood up and went to the window and looked down into the noisy, dirty street; at the masses of people hurrying back and forth on little errands, most of them so silly!

But I did not hate those people now. I did not even hate the noise. For I saw that beyond the dirt and the noise of the street there stretched the quiet, clean wonder of the sea.

And above the harsh and silly noise of human life, there sounds the deep, clear signal of the soul.

Text For Today

Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded.—James, iv:8.

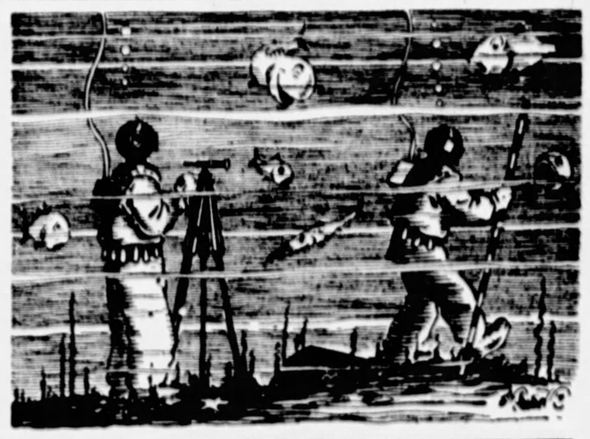
It Is Funny Now

Some Day It Will Not Be Funny.



SURVEYORS MAP SITE FOR NEW BATTLESHIP

The little picture, reprinted from Charles Dana Gibson's Life, is intended to be "funny" and is humorous. The idea of surveyors going down to the bottom of the ocean to work seems preposterous—NOW.

However, the idea of men flying up into the air seemed preposterous not long ago, and comic papers had pictures showing how preposterous it was. Also the idea of wagons running without horses seemed funny—once.

The day is coming when this little picture will not seem funny. It, perhaps, will be reproduced a few hundreds, or possibly thousands of years hence, as an illustration of the fact that men refuse to realize that THEY CAN DO WHATEVER THEY CAN IMAGINE.

The day is coming when men, not necessarily on foot, but in submarines or other underwater vehicles strong enough to resist the ocean's weight, will become as familiar with the surface of the ocean's bed as they are now familiar with the surface of the land.

It is possible that they will do away with the earthquake nuisance by leveling the sharp edges of deep valleys in the ocean, which now cause many of the earthquakes by the slipping of their steep sides.

You know that one of our submarines recently discovered "a hole" four miles deep in the Caribbean Sea. That hole was the "center of the area of the recent earthquake disturbance in Santiago."

In other words, the walls of that great hole at the bottom of the Caribbean Sea probably fell in, causing a shaking and a changing of elevation elsewhere. It takes little, in a ball as big as the earth, to produce an earthquake.

Also you know that Japan, so frequently and unfortunately visited by earthquakes, has, not far from its shore, one of the deepest "holes" in all the oceans. The tumbling down of the sides of that ocean hole doubtless accounts for the frequency of Japan's earthquakes.

Charles Dana Gibson when he returns to this earth in future incarnations, as everybody hopes he will do, may go down to the bottom of the sea to make pictures or to watch his children and grandchildren engaged in deep sea work.

Men will FARM the ocean's depths, as they now farm the land, and produce there endless supplies of food.

Animal life will continue in the ocean, where it began, long after it shall have disappeared from the land, to a large extent. Sharks and the other predatory fishes that destroy useful food fish will be wiped out, by man fighting them below water, including the devil fish that eats the lobsters, and many other nuisances.

The shad has 40,000 young in a year. These and other young of fish more prolific will be properly brought up, and "ocean bed farming" will be a profitable business, unless the middleman interferes.

The "funny picture" of today is the cold fact of tomorrow. This picture illustrates it.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Even the members of your family get tired of hearing you complain about your ailments.

It is painful to hear and most of your troubles are minor even though they are distressing.

Possibly your physical disturbances are slight in comparison with certain other members of the family who never complain.

Your imagination may have something to do with your aches and pains.

Nerves and imagination can tie up the whole human system.

It is easy to magnify trouble and harder to cast it off.

The more you think and talk about your troubles the more acute they become.

Of course if you have a real physical disability you should have it taken care of as soon as possible and if you are nervous you need rest.

But there are some folk who will complain of all sorts of ailments to get out of doing work or a disagreeable duty.

At times you have felt perfectly miserable but came a change of scene and good company you forgot your miseries—you felt better.

Try to rest when you can and let the doctor do the worrying.

Your attitude helps to kill or cure, so go slower and trust.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Saint

His tattered hat, his ragged coat;
What to the saint do these denote?

The leaky roof above his head,
His scanty share of milk and bread,
His low estate, unknown, unprized—
To give him pain were these devised?

The saint goes by and never knows
How through his coat the chill wind blows.
Though men may smile and men may sneer,
He dwells in Heaven now and here!
